EL SALVADOR: Insurgents Increase Local Attacks

The guerrillas are attempting to take advantage of a government offensive in the northeast by hitting vulnerable targets elsewhere. Recent sabotage of the electrical power system has again blacked out the eastern third of the country, and the capital was without power for several hours. The insurgents also have hit isolated military garrisons and plan raids on several cities in the near future. In addition to regaining the military initiative, they hope to score some major propaganda victories. [redacted] (b)(3)
