Colin:

The timing of your trip is ok. I will be here and it will be generally quiet in the office so we can have some time to sort things out. I don't feel in any danger. It's been fairly quiet the last week. So far, security is basically a matter of knowing where not to go at night which is easy to do. I wouldn't worry about it. In fact, I meet many people coming here who comment on normal things seem here in contrast to what they thought it was going to be like from reading the papers in the U.S., U.K. or where ever.

Make sure you bring some form of i.d. (besides passport) stating your title and publication, and four passport size photos. It might be fun for you to attend a UN press conference on Friday or Saturday and you'll need a UN press pass to do so which takes just a few minutes to get if you can prove who you are. Something on Tourism Asia stationary should be sufficient, plus a copy of the magazine.

See you next week.
