

Michael

Liam left the air-con on for overnight on July 11, 2005, and poured water into another computer. Narith said this computer doesn't work, so we need to fix like the first one happened before.

Liam has made me trouble sometime because when the day that the paper printed out, he came to the office and turned on the air-con with keeping the door open. After checking email, he went home and left the air-con on. So, I shut it off, and one day later I told him about that.

For example one more thing, on July 29, the day that the paper came out, the weather was cold with some raining. I told him that next time do not turn on the air-con because we have got the cold weather. I said that if Michael here, he turn on the air-con is up to him because he pay. So, my speech made him angry. Please give me advice, how can I do on my job?, so, I said right or wrong.
