

9: REVIEW & REFLECT

THE LESSON DESIGN TOOLKIT

After teaching the lesson, reflect on your classroom experience and leave notes for the next iteration and future lessons.

How did your lesson go?
Write three describing words on a sticky note.

How do you think students felt as they left the classroom?

What was the most successful part of today's lesson?

What was the lesson about?
How does this differ from your initial descriptions?

NOTES FOR NEXT TIME

What's the one aspect you would most like to improve upon for the next iteration of this lesson?

List 3 specific actions that can improve that aspect. Be specific about the behavior and condition.

Ex: Send a homework reminder email the day before each class meeting.

Based on this lesson's results, should changes be made to the objectives?

What patterns do you notice? List three observations. How might these patterns be reused, adapted, and improved in future lessons?

Ex: Students enjoyed presenting their small group activity findings to the class using the projector. Make time to share whenever we have an in class activity. Ask students to email their slides to me instead of taking up time as each person configures their laptop for the projector.
