INFORMATION TO USERS

This manuscript has been reproduced from the microfilm master. UMI films the text directly from the original or copy submitted. Thus, some thesis and dissertation copies are in typewriter face, while others may be from any type of computer printer.

The quality of this reproduction is dependent upon the quality of the copy submitted. Broken or indistinct print, colored or poor quality illustrations and photographs, print bleedthrough, substandard margins, and improper alignment can adversely affect reproduction.

In the unlikely event that the author did not send UMI a complete manuscript and there are missing pages, these will be noted. Also, if unauthorized copyright material had to be removed, a note will indicate the deletion.

Oversize materials (e.g., maps, drawings, charts) are reproduced by sectioning the original, beginning at the upper left-hand corner and continuing from left to right in equal sections with small overlaps. Each original is also photographed in one exposure and is included in reduced form at the back of the book.

Photographs included in the original manuscript have been reproduced xerographically in this copy. Higher quality 6" x 9" black and white photographic prints are available for any photographs or illustrations appearing in this copy for an additional charge. Contact UMI directly to order.

Abstract

_Nineteenth Century Music for Cello and Piano in the British Library Collection: An Annotated Catalogue_

by Noreen Silver

Chairperson of the Supervisory Committee: Professor Abraham Kaplan
Department of Music

This volume is an annotated catalogue of nineteenth century music for cello and piano in the British Library collection. There are over one thousand pieces that fall into this category, representing the work of six hundred and forty composers. Each composition is listed alphabetically by composer and is organized according to type, namely sonatas, incidental pieces and transcriptions. In the case of sonatas, individual movements are named, and the publisher and date and place of publication is provided. The date and place of publication also appears for most of the other works. In all cases the British Library catalogue listing appears. Where possible biographical information on each composer is included. This occurs for approximately two-thirds of the six hundred and forty composers.

There are three appendices, organized by type, that group the works according to their decade of composition. A final appendix contains detailed critiques of the Sonata in E major Opus 121 by Ignaz Moscheles, the Sonata in G minor Opus 125 by Ferdinand Ries, and the Sonata in D minor Opus 31 by Josef Wölfl.

This manual is intended as a reference guide for cellists who wish to increase the variety of nineteenth century works in their recital programs.

INTRODUCTION

The music of the nineteenth century has always figured largely in my concert programs, as it is both close to my heart and generally accessible to audiences. Yet, after a number of years of performing, I became bothered by the apparent dearth of cello-piano music that made up the accepted standard repertoire of works from this century. This limited repertoire imposed a lack of variety in my programs, and I therefore resolved to seek out as much music as I could find from this period, either in print or out of print.

I began my search several years ago in the antiquarian music shops of different European cities. At the start, this involved long hours looking at every work for cello and piano on the shelves. Following this initial step, a subjective decision was made to select certain composers and examine their publications in greater detail, with the hope of finding a cello-piano piece of sufficient quality to justify a performance. These methods, although haphazard and laborious, were fruitful enough to encourage a more systematic approach, and for this I chose the British Library as my source. The British Library contains one of the finest collections of musical scores and manuscripts in Europe, and, as the following figures indicate, my research yielded a vast number of works. This volume contains listings of over one thousand(!) titles, many of which comprise multiple compositions, by more than six hundred composers. Of these, one hundred and twenty-eight are sonatas, the collective effort of ninety-eight different composers.

After compiling a list of the works in the Library, I then set about organizing them into sections according to type, that is sonatas, incidental pieces, and transcriptions. Within these headings, pieces are arranged alphabetically by composer, with the exact title, opus number, key signature, movement tempi and date of publication. In the case of transcriptions, wherever possible the name of the arranger is provided. In all cases the British Library catalogue number is listed in bold typeface under each citation. Where the name of the composer is preceded by an asterisk a brief biographical sketch can be found in chapter four. A second means of organization is provided by three appendices, in which these large categories are further broken down according to their decade of composition. Mention must also be made of the rare occurrences where the Library only possesses a twentieth century copy of an important nineteenth century work. In these instances I have cited the modern publication, with the actual date of composition included in brackets alongside the title.

My next task was to track down information about the composers, and to write a biographical note on each one. This proved to be difficult, as approximately two hundred and fifty names were nowhere to be found. It is only the survival of their publications that has kept their names alive. However, there are almost four hundred short biographies located in chapter four, although in some cases only the dates of birth and death could be traced.

After examining the list of works, and the appendices, it became clear that the number of pieces composed for cello and piano steadily increased throughout the course of the century, indicating the growing popularity of the cello as a concert instrument. This must at least in part be due to the work of many of the great nineteenth century cellist-composers. Before the start of the nineteenth century, the violin was the unchallenged king of string instruments, its potential for virtuosic and expressive ability well exploited. As can be deduced from such works as the Beethoven Sonatas Opus 5 (1796), clearly marked for Piano and Violoncello, and technically much more demanding for the piano, the cello was not yet considered an equal partner. However, by the end of the nineteenth century no concessions were made to the cello. Through the compositions, performances and teaching of cellists such as Davidoff, Duport, Goltermann, Klengel, Piatti, Popper, Romberg, Servais and others, the technical limitations of the instrument were stretched beyond their former boundaries. As well as being able to demonstrate the changing role of the cello in history, works by these composers provide excellent teaching material.

Finally, this volume is intended as a resource book for cellists. I wish to emphasize that, while I have not attempted in this context to examine the merits of every piece listed, some in particular are of sufficient quality as to justify being singled out for special mention. I would like to draw attention to the following works:

- Sonata-Duo Opus 32 by Sir William Sterndale Bennett
- Grand Duo in D minor Opus 7 by Franz Berwald
- Sonata in E Major Opus 121 by Ignaz Moscheles
- Sonata in A minor Opus 42 by Carl Reinecke
- Sonata in G minor Opus 125 by Ferdinand Ries
- Sonata in D minor Opus 31 by Josef Wölfl

It would not be misleading to assert that these pieces have been unjustly neglected.

In a fourth appendix I provide critiques of three of these works, the sonatas by Ignaz Moscheles, Ferdinand Ries, and Josef Wölfl. I have chosen these three pieces for a variety of reasons: the composers were all immensely influenced by Beethoven, and in different ways found their musical personalities shaped by the great master. Secondly, I have performed these works in public on numerous occasions, and on each occasion the response from audience and critic alike has been wholly favorable. Within these critiques
I have touched upon salient points of interest, naturally selecting elements that advance my arguments for a re-evaluation of these works. I would also suggest that in each of these three sonatas the writing hints at future musical developments, as well as representing the current tastes, and in this way these sonatas can be for the cellist a kind of two-way mirror on nineteenth century evolution.

As I wrote at the beginning, the principal reason behind this research was the desire to provide greater variety in concert programs. Each of the above mentioned sonatas would be a meritorious addition to any recital, as would many of the small-scale works. In fact, I would go so far as to say that they are as worthwhile as some that have survived the test of time. In conclusion let me state that, had such a manual as this been available to me several years ago, my search for new repertoire would have been greatly simplified.
However it must be said that, in the process of researching and organizing this material into its present format, I have made many more discoveries than I could have imagined possible. If this book contributes in any way to the greater knowledge, appreciation, and expansion of the cello-piano repertoire, it will have achieved its principal goal.

CHAPTER FOUR: BIOGRAPHIES

ALARD, JEAN DELPHIN (1815-1888)
French violinist and composer. He was the son of Vuillaume, the celebrated Luthier. He taught at the Paris Conservatoire, where he influenced a generation of violinists, among them Sarasate. His teaching method continued the Italian-French tradition of Vio. Alard owned some of the most beautiful violins, including the ‘Alard’ Stradivarius and the ‘Messiah.’

ALKAN, CHARLES HENRI VALENTINE [MORHANGE] (1813-1888)
French pianist and composer, whose real name was Morhange. Known as the Berlioz of the piano, he was one of the leading piano virtuosos of the nineteenth-century, renowned for his outstanding technique and imagination. Alkan was a child prodigy, publishing his Op. 1 at the age of fourteen. He became part of Chopin’s circle, but in later years was something of a misanthrope, living a reclusive existence. His enigmatic character was reflected in his compositions, which were admired by Liszt and Busoni.

ANDERSEN, ANTON JÖRGEN (1845-1926)
Swedish cellist and composer of Norwegian birth. He was an orchestral cellist in Norway until the age of twenty-one, when he moved to Sweden. There he studied composition with Johan Lindegren, and taught cello at the Stockholm Conservatory. His compositions were mostly conceived in the Austro-German style. His works include a Cello Sonata (Stockholm 1876).

ASHTON, ALGERNON BENNET LANGTON (1859-1937)
English composer and teacher. After the death of his father he lived in Leipzig, where he studied under Franz Heinig and Iwan Knorr, and later at the Leipzig Conservatory. There he studied theory and composition with Jadassohn, Richter and Reinecke. He completed his composition studies with Raff, before returning to England, where he taught piano at the Royal College of Music in London. He is best known for his piano and chamber works, which are mostly written in the German Romantic style.

ASIOLI, BONIFAZIO (1769-1832)
Italian opera composer, theorist and pianist. He was largely self taught. At the age of fourteen he taught harpsichord, flute and cello in Correggio. He became the first director of the newly founded Milan Conservatory, where he taught composition. In 1814, when forced to leave the conservatory as a ‘foreigner’ after the fall of the Kingdom of Italy, he founded a music school at his home in Correggio. He produced a series of theoretical teaching works, and his compositions include a Cello Sonata in the Classical style.

AUBER, DANIEL FRANÇOIS ESPRIT (1782-1871)
Renowned French opera composer. He studied with Cherubini, later becoming the foremost exponent of Opéra Comique in nineteenth-century France. Ironically, because of his diminutive size, Auber was unable to conduct his own music in public. His music received warm tributes from such diverse figures as Rossini and Wagner.
AUER, LEOPOLD VON (1845-1930)
Celebrated Hungarian violinist and teacher. He studied in Hanover with Joachim, and later became professor of violin (in succession to Wienawski) at the St. Petersburg Conservatory. He remained there from 1868-1917, influencing several generations of violinists, including Elman, Zimbalist, Heifetz, and Poliakin. Tchaikovsky offered to dedicate his Violin Concerto to Auer, but he declined the dedication, declaring the work to be technically awkward and too long. His legacy can still be seen in today’s Russian School.

BACHE, FRANCIS EDWARD (1833-1858)
English composer and pianist. He studied in England with Sterndale Bennett, then in Leipzig with Moritz Hauptmann. Sadly, he contracted tuberculosis, and died at the age of twenty-four.

BALFE, MICHAEL WILLIAM (1808-1870)
Irish composer and singer. He was the most successful composer of English operas in the nineteenth-century, and the only one whose fame spread throughout Europe. He studied violin and singing in England, then in Rome and Milan. Cherubini provided an introduction to Rossini, who was then at the height of his success. Balfe sang in several productions with Maria Malibran, for whom he wrote The Maid of Artois. His operas, the Bohemian Girl in particular, met with great critical acclaim, and he achieved overnight success in London. In later life he turned his attention to chamber music, and wrote a Cello Sonata (1880). He is mostly remembered for the song. Come into the garden, Maud.

BANISTER, HENRY JOHN (JOSHUA) (1803-1847)
English cellist, born in London. He was a fine player, and the author of several books on cello technique. His compositions comprise a number of works of an inconsequential nature.

BATTA, ALEXANDRE (1816-1902)
Dutch cellist, born in Maastricht, and died in Versailles. He studied under Platel at the Brussels Conservatory, but settled in Paris in 1835. He became known through several successful European concert tours. Among his compositions are many melodious pieces and transcriptions for cello and piano.

BATTANCHON, FÉLIX (1814-1893)
French cellist and composer, born in Paris. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire under Vaslin and Norblin, and subsequently joined the Grand Opera Orchestra. In 1846 he invented a small type of cello called a baryton, which he tried to popularize, without success.

BAUDIOT, CHARLES NICOLAS (1773-1849)
French cellist, born in Nancy, and died in Paris. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire under the elder Janson, whom he succeeded as cello professor. For sixteen years he was principal cellist in the Royal Orchestra. For a time his cello method, which he wrote with Levasseur and Baillot, was used at the Conservatoire. In addition to composing two Cello Concertos, two Concertinos, and a great variety of chamber music, he also wrote a guide to composers for cello entitled Instruction pour les compositeurs.
BECKER, HUGO (1863-1941)

German cellist. He studied violin and piano with his father, Jean Becker, famous violinist and founder of the Florentine Quartet. Some years later he changed to the cello and received lessons from Kündinger in Mannheim. He became so proficient by the age of fifteen, that he was offered the position of second cellist in the orchestra of the Mannheim Court Theater, which he held for one year, after which he pursued further study with Gritzmacher. In 1880 he joined his father, brother and sister on tour, and benefited greatly from meeting Piatti in London. He also studied with de Swert. From 1884-86 Becker was first cellist at the Frankfurt Opera. He later succeeded Hausmann as professor at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik. He appeared frequently with such performers as Flesch and Friedberg, Ysaye and Busoni, Marteau and Dohnanyi.

BEETHOVEN, LUDWIG VAN (1770-1827)

Ludwig van Beethoven, born in the German court city of Bonn, is one of the most influential composers in the history of Western music. He spent most of his adult life in Vienna, supporting himself by performances, teaching, and the sale of compositions. The deafness which began to afflict him before 1800 had a profound effect on his personal and artistic development.

His works are traditionally grouped into early, middle, and late periods. The early period, (up to about 1802), shows his mastery of the classical style of Haydn and Mozart, culminating in the highly dramatic compositions that mark the beginning of the middle period in 1803. This period is characterised by a heroic style, brought about in response to his increasing deafness. His late-period style began in 1815, his music becoming less dramatic and more introspective. He relied less on the classical forms, experimenting with the juxtaposition of movements of widely differing style and character.

Beethoven’s influence cannot be underestimated. His music had a profound effect on the growth of Romanticism, and no composer after Beethoven could escape the effect of his genius.

BELLINI, VINCENZO (1801-1835)

Vincenzo Bellini was one of the greatest Italian composers of opera in the nineteenth-century style known as bel canto. He won international fame with Il Cirata, and thereafter enjoyed an enormously successful career. He was a master of melodic beauty, and challenged Rossini’s style of vocal brilliancy with a simplicity that became his hallmark. Norma (Milan, 1831), became Bellini’s most admired work, its title role still one of the supreme tests for the dramatic soprano.

BENEDICT, Sir JULIUS (1804-1885)

English opera composer and conductor. He was born in Stuttgart, and studied with Weber in Dresden. In 1835 he went to London. For ten years (1838-48) he was musical director at Drury Lane. He was knighted in 1871. The influence of the Italian style formed the basis of his operatic and vocal composition. He also wrote a biography of Weber.
BENNETT, Sir WILLIAM STERDRALE (1816-1875)
The most distinguished English composer of the Romantic school. He was orphaned at the age of three, and went to live with his grandparents. He studied violin and piano at the Royal Academy of Music, and composition under Crotch and Cipriani Potter. His first piano concerto was written when he was sixteen and met with great success. It was heard by Mendelssohn, who became his close friend and invited him to Germany. He entered Mendelssohn’s circle in Leipzig, which included Moscheles and Schumann. He subsequently had a long career as a teacher in England, and in 1866 became principal of the Royal Academy of Music. The period between 1833 and 1839 was an intensely creative one, but the pressures of supporting a family caused a reduction in his output after this point, although he enjoyed something of a revival of creativity in later life. Sterndale Bennett was knighted in 1871. Mozart was always his model, although he was also influenced by the German Romantic movement, and is sometimes referred to as the English Mendelssohn. The Sonata Duo for cello and piano dates from 1852.

BÉRIOT, CHARLES AUGUSTE de (1802-1870)
Belgian violinist and composer. In 1829 he met the renowned singer Maria Malibran, whom he married in 1836, but she died six months later. He taught in the Brussels Conservatory from 1843-1852. In 1858 he became blind. He occupies an important place in the history of violin playing, as he was responsible for modernizing the classical French school.

BERLIOZ, HECTOR (1803-1869)
The French composer Louis Hector Berlioz was one of the most important musical figures of the Romantic era. His large-scale, brilliantly orchestrated compositions helped create the modern orchestra, and his innovations greatly influenced the development of nineteenth century music. His first major work, the Symphonie Fantastique, was enthusiastically received. The symphony, in five movements, is unified by the use of a short recurrent theme (idée fixe), which symbolizes the presence of the “loved one” and is heard throughout the composition. It is one of the most influential programmatic works of the nineteenth century.

Berlioz greatly increased the expressive capabilities of the orchestra by his colorful orchestration, and his unorthodox structures helped free composers from classical forms. Berlioz’s grand compositions, requiring enormous choruses and orchestras, were grossly misunderstood in France during his lifetime.

BERLYN, ANTON (1817-1870)
Dutch composer with a prolific output. Among his compositions are a Quartet for strings and two Piano Trios.

BERNARD, JEAN EMILE AUGUSTE (1843-1902)
French organist and composer. He lived in Paris. Almost all his compositions reveal his serious and reflective disposition.
BERTINI, HENRI JÉRÔME (1798-1876)
French pianist and composer. He settled in Paris in 1821. He reputedly played with Clementi's clarity of technique, and phrasing similar to that of Hummel and Moscheles. He produced nearly two hundred opus numbers, and his studies were used for over a century.

BERWALD, FRANZ (1796-1868)
Swedish composer and violinist. He played violin and viola in orchestras, but later changed profession. In 1835 he opened an orthopaedic institute, and in 1850 became manager of a glass works in north Sweden. Three years later he opened a sawmill, which supported him through later life. As a young man he travelled in Germany, and his early works show the influence of such contemporaries as Spohr, Hummel and Beethoven, although he later developed a strong stylistic independence. Sadly, he received little appreciation in his lifetime, although he is now considered to be one of the most important Scandinavian composers of the nineteenth century. The 1840s were his most productive years, and his best works are the four Symphonies. The Grand Duo for Cello and Piano dates from 1858.

BETTS, ARTHUR
English violin maker and dealer. He was the son of John Betts, one of the most prestigious string instrument makers in eighteenth century England, and founder of a firm of instrument dealers. After his father's death in 1823, the firm was run by Arthur Betts.

BIENE, AUGUSTE VAN (C.1850-?)
Dutch cellist born in Rotterdam. He studied with Servais at the Brussels Conservatory, and came to London in 1867. He began his career as a British music-hall stage performer with a play, which he wrote and produced, entitled The Broken Melody, in which he acted the part of a Russian Cellist. The play was an instant success, and van Biene acquired substantial financial security as a result. He made a recording of the theme from The Broken Melody which contains an obligato accompaniment of sobs.

BISCHOFF, KASPAR JAKOB (1823-1893)
German composer and teacher, born in Ansbach and died in Munich. He studied in Munich under Franz Lachner, and later in Leipzig before settling in Frankfurt. There he taught singing, and founded an Evangelical Sacred Choral Society in 1850. His compositions include an opera, Maske und Mantilla, three Symphonies, an Overture to Hamlet, chamber music and church music. He also published a manual of harmony in 1890.
BISHOP, Sir HENRY ROWLEY (1786-1855)
English composer. He is now remembered only for the song Home, Sweet Home, although he enjoyed a fine reputation in his day as the principal exponent of the best traditions of English song. He trained as a jockey at New Market, but later studied music. He became musical director at Covent Garden in 1810, and three years later was a founding member of the Philharmonic Society. He succeeded Crotch as Oxford Professor in 1848. He received the appellation "The English Mozart," although he was guilty of some of the most tasteless corruptions of Mozart operas, into which he would insert some popular song of the day. He was later dismissed as "a quite negligible composer."

BIZET, GEORGES ALEXANDRE CÉSAR LÉOPOLD (1838-1875)
Distinguished French composer, best known for his opera Carmen which transformed the genre of opéra comique. He studied composition with Gounod and Halévy, whose daughter he married. Besides operas, Bizet wrote piano pieces, songs, orchestral and choral music. He also began many compositions which he either destroyed or left incomplete. Carmen, written in 1873-74 and produced in 1875, was poorly received in his lifetime. Bizet's style shows the melodic influence of Gounod, and the classical forms of Mozart and Beethoven.

BLUMENFELD, FELIKS MIKHAILOVICH (1863-1931)
Russian conductor, pianist, composer and teacher. He studied composition with Rimsky-Korsakov at the St. Petersburg Conservatory, and was appointed professor there in 1897. He worked closely with Anton Rubinstein, Rimsky-Korsakov, Glazunov, Rachmaninov and Chaliapin. Among his pupils were Horowitz and Barere. His music shows the influence of Chopin, but it did not outlive him.

BOCCHERINI, LUIGI (1743-1805)
Famous Italian composer and cellist, born at Lucca in 1743, died in Madrid in 1805. He grew up in a musical environment, and was engaged as cellist in the orchestras of the Court Theater in Vienna, and in his home town of Lucca. He later went to Paris, where he became exceedingly popular as a performer and composer. In 1769 he received an invitation to the Madrid Court, and became chamber composer to the Infante Luis. After the latter's death he served as court composer successively to King Charles III and IV of Spain, and Friedrich Wilhelm II of Prussia, to whom he dedicated many of his compositions. He returned to Madrid after the death of the King in 1797, but despite his success at various European courts, Boccherini had lost his appeal to his patrons and to the public. He died in poverty in Madrid. He was one of the first of the Italian school to become a virtuoso cellist, and extended the range of possibilities on his instrument by his use of thumb position and double stops. Boccherini was an exceptionally prolific composer, with a profound admiration for Haydn. His compositions are almost exclusively chamber works, and include twenty chamber Symphonies, two Octets, sixteen Sextets, one hundred and twenty five String Quintets, twelve Piano Quintets, eighteen Quintets for Strings and Flute (or Oboe), one hundred and two String Quartets, sixty String Trios, twenty one Violin Sonatas, six Cello Sonatas, and four Cello Concertos.
BOCHSA, ROBERT NICHOLAS CHARLES (1789-1856)
Renowned French harpist and composer. He studied composition under Franz Beck. The harp became his principal instrument, but he was also a fine player of almost every known instrument. In 1813 he was appointed harpist to the emperor, and in 1816 to Louis XVIII. He developed an extremely lucrative business in forged documents, and in 1817 had to leave the country. He went to London, where he gained a prominent reputation, but suffered too many scandals (one being his elopement with the wife of Sir Henry Bishop), and again left the country. He died in Sydney, Australia.

BÖCKMANN, FERDINAND (1843-?)
Born in Hamburg, he was taught by Sebastian Lee and Magnus Klitz, who was then first Cellist at the Hamburg Stadt-Theatre. In the autumn of 1861 he was employed in the Dresden Court band, and studied for a time with Kummer. Böckmann was a gifted cellist, who became widely known through his editions of old cello music.

BOCKMÜHL, ROBERT EMIL (1820-1881)
German cellist, born in Frankfurt-am-Main. He published about seventy works, consisting of Fantasias, Variations, Divertissements, and Rondos on opera themes or national songs. He also wrote an extensive book of studies in five parts, under the title: Études pour le développement du mécanisme du violoncelle: adoptées pour l'étude élémentaire de cet instrument au Conservatoire royal de musique de Bruxelles, et au Conservatoire de musique de Bavière à Munich (Op. 17). In 1850 Bockmühl settled in Düsseldorf. At that time Robert Schumann was composing his Violoncello Concerto, for which he solicited advice from Bockmühl regarding the technical questions.

BÖDECKER, LOUIS (1845-1889)
German composer. His published works include a Trio-Phantasie for Piano and Strings, a Sonata and a Phantasie-Sonata for violin and piano, and a Serenade for horn and piano.

BOELLMANN, LÉON (1862-1897)
French organist and composer. He was a Church organist, and teacher of organ and improvisation. In his short professional life he achieved a fine reputation as teacher, composer, performer, and improver. The Sonata Op. 40 dates from c. 1897.

BOHRER, MAXIMILIAN (1785-1867)
German cellist born in Mannheim. He took part in the first performances in Paris of the late Beethoven string quartets in 1827. His brother Anton, a violinist, collaborated with him in his compositions, but he was at best a mediocre composer.
BOIELDIEU, FRANÇOIS ADRIEN (1775-1834)
Celebrated French opera composer, born at Rouen, and died at Jarcy, near Grosbois. He received his musical instruction from Charles Broche, to whom he became apprenticed as assistant organist at the Church of St. André in Rouen. He wrote patriotic pieces which were in demand during the revolutionary period. His Chant populaire pour la Fête de la Raison for chorus and orchestra was presented at the Temple of Reason (the former cathedral) in Rouen in 1793. Most of his operas were produced in Paris. Particularly successful was Le Calife de Bagdad (Paris, Sept. 16, 1800), which appealed to the public because of its exotic subject and pseudo-oriental arias.
In 1802 Boieldieu was invited to Russia to write operas for the Imperial theaters in St. Petersburg. He returned to Paris, and was appointed professor of composition at the Conservatoire in 1817, but resigned nine years later. He achieved his greatest success with the Romantic opera La Dame Blanche, based on Walter Scott's novels The Monastery and Guy Mannering. The subject of the drama and effectiveness of the musical setting corresponded precisely to the popular tastes at the time. During the last years of his life he developed an interest in painting, and his pictures show a modest talent in landscape. He was also a successful teacher, including Félig, Adam, and P. J. G. Zimmerman among his students.
Boieldieu composed about forty operas, of which several were written in collaboration with Méhul, Berton, Hérold, Cherubini, Catel, Isouard, Kreutzer, and Auber. He holds a significant place in the history of French opera.

BOSSI, MARCO ENRICO (1861-1925)
Italian composer, organist and pianist. Bossi won worldwide renown as one of the finest organists of the day, and is remembered for his organ pieces, instrumental and choral compositions. He died at sea while returning from New York.

BOUBÉE, ALBERT (1850-?)
Born in 1850, at Naples. Having failed to succeed as either a merchant or a teacher, he turned to the musical profession. He was inspired by his cello teacher, Gaetano Ciandelli, and by the playing of Servais and Piatti to make up for his late start. In 1867 Boubée settled in London, where he worked with various orchestras. Of his cello compositions, which consist of several solo pieces, the best known is La Gymnastique du Violoncelliste.

BOURGAULT-DUCOUDRAY, LOUIS ALBERT (1840-1910)
French scholar and composer. He studied for a career in Law. One of the founders of the Société Nationale de Musique, he developed an interest in national folk music, and did intensive research into the popular songs, both ancient and modern, of many countries. Some of his findings were published in harmonized versions. Bourgault-Ducoudray was a strong proponent of all forms of music, whether European or Oriental, and it is more than likely that Debussy, who studied with him for a time at the Paris Conservatoire, was influenced by him in this respect.
BRAGA, GAETANO (1829-1907)
Italian cellist and composer who studied cello with Gaetano Ciafelli and composition with Mercadante at the Naples Conservatory. After leaving the Conservatory he travelled in Europe performing as a soloist and chamber music player, eventually settling in Florence. Braga owned one of the few 'late period' cellos by Stradivari, dated 1731. He composed mainly for the stage, but also published a Cello Concerto, and smaller pieces for cello and piano. For many years he maintained great popularity with a salon piece entitled the Leggenda Valacca, also known as La serenata, or the Angel's Serenade, written for voice with cello obbligato.

BRAHMS, JOHANNES (1833-1897)
Johannes Brahms was one of the seminal musical figures of the nineteenth-century. Opera was the only major musical medium in which he did not write. He was born in Hamburg, but later lived in Vienna. As a young man he was befriended by Schumann, who arranged for the publication of his first songs and piano sonatas. More than any other composer of the second half of the nineteenth century, Brahms was responsible for reviving "absolute" music, as opposed to program music. He employed established forms in new and refreshing ways, and made considerable use of German folk song. His compositions represent the pinnacle of achievement in German Romanticism.

BRANDUKOV, ANATOLY ANDREYEVICH (1856-1930)
Russian cellist. He studied at the Moscow Conservatory with Cosman and Fitzenhagen, then lived in Switzerland and France. His performances took him also to London, and were always favourably received. Brandukov performed the Saint-Saëns Cello Concerto under the composer's direction, and appeared yearly in Russia, with such artists as Anton Rubinstein, Tchaikovsky, Liszt and Rachmaninov. Tchaikovsky dedicated his Pezzo Capriccioso to him, and Rachmaninov his Cello Sonata (1901).

Bronsart, Ingeborg von (1840-1913)
Swedish pianist and composer, wife of German composer, pianist and conductor Hans Bronsart von Schellendorf (1830-1913). She wrote operas to her husband's libretto. Liszt praised her playing and her gifted artistic temperament. In addition she was famous for her captivating beauty.

BRUCH, MAX KARL AUGUST (1838-1920)
German composer. He studied theory in Bonn with H. C. Breidenstein, and later with Ferdinand Hiller. His piano studies were directed by Reinecke and Ferdinand Breuning in Cologne. For two years Bruch succeeded Julius Benedict as conductor of the Liverpool Philharmonic Society, before returning to Germany and becoming a professor at the Berlin Academy. In contrast to the direction taken by the 'new German school' his style was influenced by the folk music of various countries.
BURGMÜLLER, JOHANN FRIEDRICH FRANZ (1806-1874)
Prominent German composer and pianist. He settled in Paris after 1832, and established himself as a fashionable writer of songs, descriptive piano studies (mostly intended for children) and stage works.

BURROWES, JOHN FRECKLETON the Elder (1787-1852)
English organist and composer. He was a pupil of William Horsley. For nearly forty years he held the post of organist at St. James’s, Piccadilly. Burrowes was one of the original members of the Philharmonic Society. His works include an Overture, songs, piano pieces, chamber music and operatic arrangements. He was author of the Pianoforte Primer (1818), and the Thorough-bass Primer (1819).

BUSONI, FERRUCCIO MICELANGIOLO BENVENUTO (1866-1924)
Renowned German-Italian composer and pianist. He was a child prodigy who was regarded as a greater pianist than Liszt by those who heard both. His music was never composed with the purpose of achieving popularity, but sought to explore depths of seriousness. Busoni was a highly educated man who possessed great intellectual power. He was influential in directing the development of modern music. In his desire to counteract the programmatic trends of the nineteenth century, he advocated instead the intensive study of Bach and Mozart.

CARAFA DE COLOBRANO, MICHELE (1787-1872)
Italian composer who studied first in Naples, then in Paris with Cherubini and Kalkbrenner. In Naples he joined the army and took part in the Russian expedition of 1812. Carafa became one of the most prolific opera composers of his day. In 1834 he acquired French citizenship. According to Rossini himself, Carafa would have enjoyed a much wider success had he not had the misfortune of being Rossini’s contemporary.

CARRODUS, JOHN BERNHARD MOLIQUE (1836-1895)
English violinist. He was born in Braithwaite, and took his first violin lessons from his father and J.B.Zerbin. He later became the protégé of Bernhard Molique. Spohr thought very highly of his playing, and in 1861 he joined the Covent Garden orchestra, becoming principal first violin there eight years later. He appeared both as soloist and orchestral musician in London and the provinces. He also undertook extensive foreign tours. Carrodus was a much sought after performer, whose high standards were responsible for raising the level of string playing in English orchestras during the later nineteenth century.

CASELLA, CESARE A. (C.1849-?)
Italian cellist born in Operto. He enjoyed a distinguished career as a performer, and was the father of the composer Alfredo Casella. He died sometime after 1886. Casella was a prolific but superficial composer.
CHAIKOVSKY, PETR IL’ICH (1840-1893)
The Russian composer Petr Il’ich Chaikovsky was born in a settlement in the Ural Mountains. He taught at the Moscow Conservatory when it opened in September 1866, and established close ties with the composers of the nationalist group known as "The Five," especially Mily Balakirev and Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov. The critic Vladimir Stasov called him the "sixth member of their circle." Tchaikovsky's lyricism owes much to Russian folk song, which he frequently quotes or imitates, and to the nineteenth century Russian salon song. He is probably the most popular of the nineteenth century Russian masters, and the first to have had a formal music education.

CHAUSSON, ERNEST (1855-1899)
Eminent French composer whose works reflect the transition from late romanticism to impressionism. He studied with César Franck, who greatly influenced him. As the secretary of the Société Nationale de Musique, he encouraged the efforts of contemporary composers such as Claude Debussy. His compositions include the Symphony in B-flat Major, Poème for violin and orchestra, chamber music, choral works, operas, and songs. Soon after achieving public recognition and at the beginning of a promising career, Chausson was killed in a bicycle accident.

CERUBINI, LUIGI (1760-1842)
Italian composer, theorist, teacher and administrator. He became a dominant figure in French musical life for half a century. He made a major contribution to French operatic history and had a lasting influence on music education, both in France and abroad. His lifetime saw great changes in musical fashions, and Cherubini was unable to adapt fully to the Romantic style. He was a leading conservative influence at this time of change, writing operas in both the Italian and French traditions. His later compositions consist of church music, orchestral and chamber music, and a few operas. Most of his more than four hundred compositions were forgotten until their rediscovery in the twentieth century. Les Deux Journées (The Water Carrier) is considered his finest opera, and influenced Beethoven's Fidelio.

CHOPIN, FRÉDÉRIC FRANÇOIS (1810-1849)
Chopin was one of the most illustrious composers of music for the piano. He was born near Warsaw, Poland, of a French father and Polish mother. In 1832 he settled in Paris, where he taught piano, composed, and performed his own music. Apart from some songs and chamber music, Chopin wrote almost exclusively for the piano, and his harmonic innovations influenced Liszt, Wagner and Scriabin. His music is highly expressive, and is filled with delicate passage work and subtle melodic ornamentation.
CLARK, FREDERICK SCOTSON (1840-1883)
English clergyman, organist, and composer, born in London in 1840, died there in 1883. He studied with Sergent in Paris and with E. J. Hopkins. He also studied at the Royal Academy of Music in London with Bennett, Goss, Engel, Pettit, and Pinsuti, while receiving a religious education at Cambridge and Oxford. He took further lessons in Leipzig and Stuttgart, returning in 1873 to London, where he founded the London Organ School. In 1878 he represented England as organist at the Paris Exposition. He composed many works for the organ, sacred vocal pieces, songs, and many piano works. He also played and composed for the harmonium.

CLARKE, JAMES HAMILTON SIREE (1840-1912)
English organist, composer and conductor. He was a prolific composer of church music, organ solos, operettas and orchestral works. He published a Manual of Orchestration (London, 1888) as well as some fiction and music criticism.

COENEN, JOHANNES MEINARDOUS (1825-1899)
Dutch conductor, composer and bassoonist. His compositional style is reminiscent of Mendelssohn and Gade.

COSSMANN, BERNHARD (1822-1910)
German cellist. He studied cello under Theodore Müller and Kummer, and composition with Moritz Hauptmann. For one year he was a member of the orchestra of the Grand Opéra in Paris, then embarked upon a solo career. Cossmann also played chamber music with Ferdinand David, Joachim and Gade, and in 1866 was appointed professor of cello at the Moscow Conservatory. Later he taught at the newly-founded Conservatory at Hoch. Cossmann was known for his warm tone, technical accuracy, good taste, and conscientiousness. He wrote a variety of works for his instrument, and his studies are still widely used.

COURVOISIER, KARL (CARL) (1846-1908)
Swiss violinist, born in Basel and died in Liverpool. He studied at the Leipzig Conservatory with David and Röntgen, and in Berlin with Joachim. In 1885 he settled in Liverpool as a teacher. Courvoisier is best remembered for his publications Die Violintechnik, Ecole de la vélocité for violin, and Méthode de violon.

CRAMER, HENRY (1818-1877)
Born in Frankfurt, he became a highly successful pianist and prolific composer of piano music, principally salon music. Throughout his career he travelled to all the important capitals of Europe.

CROUCH, FREDERICK WILLIAM (1783-1844)
The son of William Crouch, organist of Old Street Church, London. Along with many arrangements and chamber pieces, Crouch wrote a Complete Treatise on the Violoncello (1826). His son Frederick Nicholls Crouch (1808-1896) was a cellist, singer and composer.
CZIBULKA, ALPHONS W. (1842-1894)
Hungarian bandmaster and composer. At age fifteen he appeared as a solo pianist in Russia. He later became a music teacher and conductor. Czibulka entered military service, becoming bandmaster of the 19th Austro-Hungarian Infantry Regiment. His compositions were mostly dance and salon music, and some operettas. The Stephanie-Gavotte remains his best-known composition.

DALLIER, HENRI (1849-1934)
French organist and composer. He was an organ pupil of Franck at the Paris Conservatoire. Dallier gained a reputation for his descriptive and imaginative improvisation on the organ and was Fauré’s successor as organist at the church of La Madeleine. Dallier played at Fauré’s funeral. He composed numerous organ pieces, some of which were highly praised.

DANCLA, JEAN BAPTISTE CHARLES (1817-1907)
French violinist, composer and teacher. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire with Paul Guérin and Baillot, then studied counterpoint and fugue with Halévy, and composition with Berton. In the 1830s he formed a chamber music group with the members of his family, and their concerts at Hesselbein’s home became a regular feature of the Paris season. Dancla worked for the postal administration before being offered a position at the Conservatoire in 1855. A prolific composer, he won prizes for four of his fourteen String Quartets, and three of his works for male chorus. His music survives through his pedagogic works.

DANZI, FRANZ (1763-1826)
German composer who learned cello from his father, as well as piano and singing. Abt Vogler instructed him in composition. From the age of fifteen, he worked as a cellist in the Mannheim orchestra, and later took over his father’s position in Munich. In 1790 he married the singer Margaretha Marchand, daughter of the Opera Director in Munich, but she died nine years later. In 1807 Danzi was appointed Kapellmeister in Stuttgart, where he met and became the friend of Carl Maria von Weber. He then took over the directorship of the opera at Karlsruhe. Music for the stage forms the greater part of his compositional output. The Sonata for Cello or Basset Horn and Piano, Op. 62, dates from 1823.

DAVENPORT, FRANCIS WILLIAM (1847-1925)
English composer and writer on music. He read Law at University College, Oxford, then studied music with Sir George Macfarren. Davenport was professor of harmony and counterpoint at Oxford from 1879, and his Elements of Music, and Elements of Harmony and Counterpoint have been widely used as basic handbooks.
DAVIDOFF, KARL YUL’YEVIICH (1838-1889)
Russian cellist, composer and administrator. He began learning cello with Schmidt in Moscow and Schubert in St. Petersburg. The son of a Jewish doctor, Davidov studied mathematics at Moscow University, then went to Leipzig to study composition with Moritz Hauptmann. Moscheles and Ferdinand David heard him play and invited him to appear as soloist in his own concerto with the Gewandhaus Orchestra. He succeeded Grützmacher as principal cellist of the orchestra and cello professor at the Conservatory, but later returned to St. Petersburg where he was appointed Imperial solo cellist, and teacher at the Imperial Conservatory. Acclaimed as one of the greatest players of his day, Davidov wrote several Concertos and numerous salon pieces for cello. He began an opera, Poltava, in 1875 but broke off the composition, and in 1881 sent the libretto to Tchaikovsky, who used it with modifications for his opera Mazeppa. In the year before his death Davidov wrote the first part of a Violoncell-Schule.

DELSART, JULES (1844-1900)
French cellist and viol player who studied with Franchomme at the Paris Conservatoire. Together with Howell and Popper he gave the first performance of Popper’s Requiem for three cellos. After the death of Franchomme, he took over his position at the Conservatoire. A fine teacher, he had many distinguished pupils including Paul Bazelaire, Marcel Casadesus, Louis Feuillard, Louis Fournier and Georges Papin.

DESSAU, BERNHARD (1861-1923)
German violinist, born in Hamburg and died in Berlin. He studied with Joachim and Wieniawski, and in 1906 became professor at the Berlin Conservatory. Dessau held a number of positions as concertmaster in Germany and the Netherlands, and was a prolific composer. He was best known for his Violin Concerto im alten Stil.

DIABELLI, ANTON (1781-1858)
Austrian publisher and composer. Although he studied music, Diabelli entered a monastery in the year 1800. After the dissolution of the Bavarian monasteries (1803) he went to Vienna, where he became known for his compositions and arrangements. He opened a publishing company (Cappi & Diabelli) in 1818. A year later he sent his waltz theme to every composer in Austria that he considered to be important. About fifty responded with individual variations (including Liszt, who provided his first composition at the age of eleven). Beethoven’s response was the massive work commonly known as the Diabelli Variations, Op. 120.

DIÉMER, LOUIS JOSEPH (1843-1919)
French pianist and composer of Alsatian origin. He attended the Paris Conservatoire where he enjoyed considerable success, acquiring a reputation as a virtuoso. After succeeding Marmontel at the Conservatoire Diémer exercised great influence on the next generation of French pianists, including Cortot, Risler and Robert Casadesus. His compositions were primarily for the piano, but he also wrote songs, some of which met with success. He also edited piano music, transcribed symphonic movements and opera excerpts for the piano, and published a piano method.
DIETRICHERALBERT HERMANN (1829-1908)
German conductor and composer. He studied piano and composition with Julius Otto. Later he studied at the Leipzig Conservatory with Moscheles, Julius Rietz and Moritz Hauptmann. In the 1850s Dietrich entered Schumann’s circle in Düsseldorf, and became friendly with Brahms. In 1853 he wrote the opening Allegro of the F - A - E Sonata for Violin (the other movements were composed by Brahms and Schumann) as a greeting for Joachim. As a conductor he championed primarily the works of Bach, Schumann and Brahms, having little sympathy for the music of the new German School. He was a follower of Schumann, and his works enjoyed a considerable reputation in his lifetime. Towards the end of his life Dietrich wrote a collection of memoirs of Brahms which was translated into English the year after it first appeared.

DIEZ, FRIEDRICH WILHELM (1833-1897)
German violinist. He was a pupil of Louis Spohr. Among his compositions are a Sextet for strings, and a String Quartet.

DONIZETTI, DOMENICO GAETANO MARIA (1797-1848)
Italian composer. In the years between the death of Bellini (1835) and the emergence of Verdi with Nabucco (1842), Donizetti dominated Italian opera. He achieved international fame with his opera Anna Bolena (1830), and with Lucia di Lammermoor (1835) Donizetti produced a score that was to become the foundation stone of Italian Romanticism.

DORN, ALEXANDER JULIUS PAUL (1833-1901)
Born in Riga and died in Berlin. He studied with his father Heinrich Dorn, and traveled as a pianist and choral conductor. After ten years in Egypt he settled in Berlin, where he taught piano at the Hochschule für Musik. Dorn was a prolific composer, his output comprising masses, operettas, and salon pieces for piano.

DOTZAUER, JUSTUS JOHANN FRIEDRICH (1783-1860)
German cellist, teacher and composer. Dotzauer learned the cello, violin and piano, eventually choosing the cello as his preferred instrument. He then went to Mannheim, where he studied with Kriegk. From 1805-1811 he was a member of the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra, later becoming first cellist in the Dresden Orchestra. His teaching ability and publications resulted in the so-called ‘Dresden School’ of playing, which influenced such pupils as Kummer, Voigt, Drechsler, Schubert, and his son Karl Ludwig, and through them Grützmacher, Cossmann, Goltermann and their pupils. Dotzauer wrote an opera, Overtures, Symphonies, a Mass, and several chamber pieces, which have largely been forgotten. He combined great musicianship with an advanced technique, and his work represented a milestone in the development of cello performance.
DRAESEKE, FELIX AUGUST BERNHARD (1835-1913)
German composer. Born into a clerical family, he was destined for the Church, but decided to devote himself to music and entered the Leipzig Conservatory. There he studied composition under Julius Rietz. The Conservatory disapproved of his progressive tendencies, and he moved to Switzerland in 1862. Three years later Draeseke suffered acute hearing loss, and returned to Germany, accepting a position at the Dresden Conservatory in 1884. He wrote his own operatic texts. In later life he discarded the radical, programmatic elements of his early compositions, in favour of Classical forms.

DUBOIS, FRANÇOIS CLÉMENT THÉODORE (1837-1924)
French composer, teacher and organist. He replaced Saint-Saëns as organist at the Madeleine in 1877, at the same time teaching harmony and counterpoint at the Paris Conservatoire (where he later became director). Dubois wrote Oratorios and other works for the stage, as well as numerous pieces in almost every genre. His theoretical works are still widely used in musical academies.

DUPORT, JEAN LOUIS (1749-1819)
Cellist and composer, brother of Jean-Pierre Duport. He began to study the cello as a pupil of his brother, and soon became his equal. His style of playing was often compared to that of the violinist Viotti. Due to the turmoil of the French Revolution, he went to Berlin, where he served with his brother as court cellist in Prussia. While there Duport wrote a treatise on playing the cello entitled Essai sur le doigtier du violoncelle et la conduite de l'archet, dédié aux professeurs de violoncelle. In this work he set out his theories of fingering, which had hitherto not been standardized. He taught cello at the Paris Conservatoire from 1813-1816, and later opened a piano factory. His compositions comprise concertos and sonatas for the cello, as well as light salon pieces, and a book of Exercises. His 1711 Stradivari cello, which he inherited from his father, was purchased by August Franchomme in 1843 (in 1974 it was acquired by Mstislav Rostropovich).

DUPUIS, SYLVAIN (1856-1931)
Belgian conductor and composer. He studied at the Liège Conservatory and won the Belgian Prix de Rome in 1881 with the cantata Le Chant de la Création. He was appointed professor of harmony in Liège. As a conductor he introduced into Belgium much new music, including works by Wagner and Debussy.

DURAND, JACQUES (1865-1928)
Son of the co-founder of the music publishers A. Durand & Fils, he succeeded his father, renaming the firm Durand & Cie in 1909. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire where he formed lasting friendships with Dukas and Debussy. Durand was a prolific composer, and edited and transcribed quantities of music by other composers. His company was the original publisher of almost all the music of Saint-Saëns, Debussy and Ravel. Jacques Durand produced the series of Concerts Durand from 1910-1913, which always supported French contemporary music.
DURAND, MARIE AUGUSTE (1830-1909)
Co-founder, with Schoenewerk, of the music publishing firm Durand, Schoenewerk & Cie (founded in 1869), later renamed A. Durand & Fils. He was a classmate of Franck and Saint-Saëns at the Paris Conservatoire, where he studied the organ under Benoît. Durand became a music critic and composer, his publications including sacred and secular vocal music, and many works for the piano and organ. He had a particular liking for the harmonium, for which he composed and arranged extensively. His son, Jacques Durand, became a partner in the publishing business after the withdrawal of Schoenewerk in 1891.

EBERT, LUDWIG (1834-?)
Born at Schloss Kladrabau, in Bohemia, Ebert received his early musical training from his father, and went in 1846 to Prague to study at the Conservatory. Further study under Goltermann followed in Vienna. He joined the opera orchestra in Temesvar, and then became first cellist at the Oldenburg Hofkapelle, where he worked until 1874. Ebert was awarded the title of Concertmaster by the Grand Duke, and later joined the Gürzenich orchestra in Cologne, where he also taught at the Conservatory. After 1888 Ebert based himself in Wiesbaden. Among his published works are Four pieces for Violoncello and Piano in the form of a Sonata (Op. 3), and three Charakterstücke (Op. 7).

EHRLICH, KARL HEINRICH ALFRED (1822-1899)
Austrian pianist, teacher, writer and critic of Hungarian descent. He studied piano under Thalberg, Henselt and Bocklet, and composition under Sechter. Subsequently working in Bucharest, Hanover, Wiesbaden, London, Frankfurt and Berlin, where he eventually settled in 1862. Ehrlich is best remembered for his pedagogical works. One of his unpublished works, Konzerstück in ungarischen Weisen, provided Liszt with a theme he used in his Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2.

ELEY, CHRISTOPH FRIEDRICH (1756-?)
German cellist. He lived in London for many years, where he held the position of principal cellist at Covent Garden for a time. Eley officially changed his name to the English version of Christopher Frederick in June, 1793. Among his compositions are numerous dances, marches, duets for violin and cello, a Cello Sonata and a cello method.

ELGAR, Sir EDWARD WILLIAM (1857-1934)
English composer. He claims a distinguished place among European Romantic composers, and the leading one in British music of his time. His inspiration came from the culture and landscape of his own country, and he created a popular national language. Elgar worked in all the major forms except opera, leaving a significant body of symphonic music, as well as the finest oratorios, The Dream of Gerontius, The Apostles and The Kingdom, written by an English composer.
ELLCOTT, ROSALIND FRANCES (1857-1924)
English composer, born in Cambridge and died in London. She studied at the Royal Academy of Music, and later with Thomas Wingham. Her most important works, the cantatas Radiant Sister of the Dawn, and Elysium, were the results of commissions to write works for the Gloucester and Cheltenham Festivals.

ERLANGER, GUSTAV (1842-1908)
German composer, who studied with Reinecke. His output includes a Sextet for strings and winds, a Piano Quintet, and a Sonata for violin and piano.

ERNST, HEINRICH WILHELM (1814-1865)
Moravian violinist and composer. He studied at the Vienna Conservatory, with Joseph Boehm (violin), and Seyfried (composition). After hearing Paganini perform in Vienna in 1828 Ernst began to follow the maestro on tour and to play some of his unpublished works. He was acclaimed as one of the outstanding violinists of his time. His greatest success came in London, where he settled in 1855. In 1859 he appeared as leader of the Beethoven Society string quartet with Joachim, Wienawski and Piatti. Ernst’s compositions demand the utmost in technical ability, as well as showing imagination and ingenuity.

EWALD, VICTOR (1860-1935)
Russian composer, born in St. Petersburg in 1860, died in Leningrad in 1935. His main profession was engineering, which he taught for twenty years at the Institute of Civil Engineering. His involvement in ethnomusicology led him to join expeditions to northern Russia collecting folk songs. Ewald also played the cello and French horn, and composed a number of chamber works, of which his brass quintet has maintained popularity.

FARMER, EMILY BARDLEY
Nineteenth-century English composer of chamber, vocal and operatic music.

FARMER, HENRY (1819-1891)
English violinist and composer, born in Nottingham. He taught himself to play both the violin and organ. His compositions include violin pieces, and several violin instruction works.

FAURÉ, GABRIEL URBAIN (1845-1924)
French composer, teacher, pianist and organist. He became the most advanced composer of his generation, developing a personal style that strongly influenced many early twentieth-century composers. His harmonic and melodic innovations also affected the teaching of harmony for later generations.
FISCHER, ADOLPHE (1850-?)
Born in Brussels, his name implies a German origin. His father was a conductor in Belgium, and founder of the first Belgian Society for male singers. Fischer attended the Brussels Conservatory, where he studied with Servais. At sixteen years of age he won the Premier Prix. After his studies were completed, Fischer moved to Paris, and soon established a fine reputation as a soloist in France and Germany.

FITZENHAGEN, KARL FRIEDRICH WILHELM (1848-1890)
German cellist. He learned piano, violin, cello and several wind instruments. In 1862 he became the pupil of Theodore Müller. He was released from all military service, and went to Dresden to study with Grützmacher. In 1870 he was appointed professor at the Imperial Conservatory in Moscow, and soon acquired a reputation as the greatest teacher in Russia. Later he became concertmaster of the Russian Imperial Musical Society, and director of the Moscow Musical and Orchestral Society. As a performer he was equally gifted in solo and chamber music playing. Thanks to his friendship with Tchaikovsky, he received the dedication of the Variations on a Rococo Theme in 1876. Fitzenhagen was himself an industrious composer, writing principally for the cello. Among his works can be listed four Cello Concertos, a Suite for Cello and Orchestra, cello studies, and a String Quartet which won the first prize of the St. Petersburg Chamber Musical Union.

FLOTOW, Count FRIEDRICH ADOLF FERDINAND VON (1812-1883)
German composer who attended the Paris Conservatoire, studying the piano with J. P. Pixis and composition with A. Reicha. After collaborating with Albert Grisar he began to make a name for himself as a composer. His most popular opera, Martha, oder Der Markt zu Richmond, was presented at the Weimar court theatre, with Liszt conducting. He also published orchestral and chamber music, which possesses some of the same characteristics as his stage works, namely graceful melodic writing and clarity of texture.

FOERSTER (FÖRSTER), ALBAN (1849-1916)
German violinist, born in Reichenbach and died in Neustrelitz. He studied at the Dresden Conservatory, to which he returned as a teacher in 1881. Foerster spent some time as court musician at Neustrelitz, where he became Kapellmeister. His compositions include works for orchestra, chamber music, violin music, songs, piano pieces, and a ballet entitled Träumerei in der Waldmühle.
FRANCHOMME, AUGUSTE (1808-1884)
French cellist and composer. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire with J. H. Levasseur and Norblin. In 1828 he became a founder-member of the Société des Concerts du Conservatoire. He held several orchestral positions, and succeeded Norblin as cello professor at the Conservatoire in 1846, holding that post until his death. He was also a member of the Alard Quartet. Franchomme was acknowledged as the most distinguished French cellist of his day, renowned for his expressive, singing tone, and tasteful interpretations. He formed friendships with Mendelssohn and Chopin, and collaborated with the latter on a Grand Duo Concertante. Chopin dedicated his Sonata Op. 65 to Franchomme. His own compositions include a Cello Concerto and numerous cello solos with orchestral, chamber or piano accompaniment.

FRANCK, EDUARD (1817-1893)
German pianist, composer and teacher. He studied privately with Mendelssohn, whose compositional style he tried to emulate. He became a teacher and worked in Cologne, Berne and Berlin. His music was praised by his contemporaries, including Schumann.

FRANCO-MENDES, JACQUES (1812-?)
Dutch cellist of Portuguese origin.

FUCHS, ROBERT (1847-1927)
Austrian composer, teacher, organist and conductor. He studied flute, violin, piano, organ and thoroughbass at an early age. After moving to Vienna, he studied composition with Dessoff. Fuchs taught a generation of musicians that included Ernst Decsey, Mahler, Sibelius, Franz Schmidt, Schreker, Wolf and Zemlinsky. He was a friend of Brahms, who thought highly of his work, and praised the skill and charm of his music.

GADE, NIELS WILHELM (1817-1890)
Danish composer and founder of the modern Scandinavian school of composition, he was born and died in Copenhagen. He studied violin with a member of the Danish court band, and took composition lessons with A. P. Berggreen. At the age of twenty three, he wrote his overture Nachklänge von Ossian, for which he was awarded a prize by the Copenhagen Musical Society. This early overture became his most popular work, and remained part of the standard orchestral repertoire for many years. His next important work was the Symphony in C minor, which he sent to Mendelssohn in Leipzig. This initiated his meeting with Mendelssohn and their subsequent friendship. After Mendelssohn’s death in 1847, Gade became principal conductor of the Leipzig Gewandhaus concerts, but on the outbreak of the Schleswig-Holstein war in 1848, he returned to Copenhagen. There he became chief conductor of the Copenhagen Musical Society, and in 1866 was a co-founder of the Copenhagen Conservatory. He was by then fully established in Germany and Denmark as a master composer. His music adopted the Romantic German style, but also incorporated elements of national Danish melodies, so leading the way to further development of Scandinavian music. His works include eight Symphonies, four Overtures, a Violin Concerto, eleven cantatas, chamber music, works for piano solo, and songs.
GALLENBERG, COUNT WENZEL ROBERT VON (1783-1839)
Austrian composer, born in Vienna and died in Rome. His principal studies were with Albrechtsberger. In 1803 he married Countess Giulietta Guicciardi, to whom Beethoven dedicated his Sonata Op. 27 No. 2. Gallenberg wrote many successful ballets in Naples for the impresario Barbaja, and joined him later in Vienna as his partner when Barbaja was director of the Opera. He attempted to manage the Kärnthner-Theater in 1829 but failed, and returned to Italy, where he rejoined Barbaja. He wrote about fifty ballets, and piano works. Beethoven wrote a set of variations on one of his themes.

GARCIN, JULES AUGUSTE (1830-1896)
French violonist and composer, born at Bourges and died in Paris. He studied under Clavel and Alard at the Paris Conservatoire, where he won the first prize in 1853. Later he became solo violonist, and associate conductor of the Paris Opera Orchestra. Most of his career was divided between conducting and acting as concertmaster of various orchestras. He was appointed conductor of the Société des Concerts. His compositions include a Violin Concerto and several solo violin works.

GENISHTA, JOSIF JASIOFOVICH (1795-1853)
Russian composer, conductor, pianist and cellist. He studied piano and composition with Johann Wilhelm Hässler. Genishta became known especially for his songs. His instrumental writing is classical in its construction. The first of his three Cello Sonatas was the subject of a review in the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik, and was highly praised therein by Schumann.

GÉRARDY, JEAN (1877-1929)
Belgian cellist, born in Spain. He studied with Massau at the Liège Conservatory, where his interest in chamber music was fostered by playing in a trio with Ysaye and Paderewski. Later he formed a trio with Ysaye and Godowski, with whom he toured the U.S. in 1913-1914. He owned a Stradivari cello made in 1710.

GERMAN, SIR EDWARD (EDWARD GERMAN JONES) (1862-1936)
English composer, born in Whitchurch and died in London. He studied organ, violin, theory, composition and orchestration at the Royal Academy of Music. On graduating he spent much of his time teaching and conducting, but with the success of his incidental music to a production of King Richard III at the Globe Theatre, he was able to devote himself entirely to composition. His honors included being elected a Fellow of the Royal Academy of Music in 1885, a knighthood in 1928, and the award of the gold medal of the Royal Philharmonic Society in 1934.

GERNSHEIM, FRIEDRICH (1839-1916)
German composer, conductor and pianist. He studied with Louis Liebe and Ernst Pauer, and at the Leipzig Conservatory with Moscheles, Hauptmann and Ferdinand David. Later he taught in Berlin. He was a conservative composer, deeply influenced by Brahms, and produced his best work for chamber ensemble.
GHYS, JOSEPH (1801-1848)
Belgian violinist, born at Ghent and died in St. Petersburg. He studied with Lafont at the Brussels Conservatory, and later taught in Amiens and Nantes. From 1832, he made concert tours in France, Belgium, Germany, Austria, and northern Europe. He wrote Le Mouvement perpétuel for Violin with string quartet, a Violin Concerto, and other music for the violin.

GILBERT, ALFRED (1828 - ?)
English pianist and composer, born in Salisbury. He became a student at the Royal Academy of Music in 1845. He held positions as organist at St. Thomas's church and Hanover Chapel. Gilbert was honored in 1884 by being elected to the Socio Onorario della Reale Accademia Santa Cecilia in Rome. He was a member of the Philharmonic Society, and in 1896 became its orchestral manager. His works include Cantatas, Operettas, chamber music, and a pianoforte school.

GILLET, ERNEST (1856-1940)
French composer and cellist, born in Paris. He studied at the Conservatoire, and played for many years in the orchestra of the Paris Opera. He published a large number of salon pieces, of which Loin du Bal for piano appeared in numerous arrangements, and achieved great popularity.

GIULIANI, MAURO (1781-1829)
Italian guitar virtuoso, born at Bisceglie, near Bari, and died in Naples. He was entirely self-taught, and at the age of nineteen undertook a highly successful tour in Europe. Giuliani settled in Vienna in 1806, where he came into contact with Hummel, Moscheles, and Diabelli. Beethoven developed an interest in him, and wrote some guitar music expressly for his performances. In 1823 he visited London, where he met with such outstanding success that a special publication, devoted to reports about his activities and named The Giulianiad, came into being, although only a few issues appeared. Giuliani published over two hundred works for guitar, and perfected a new instrument with a shorter fingerboard (la gitarra de terza).

GLAZUNOV, ALEKSANDR (1865-1936)
Russian composer, born in St. Petersburg and died in Neuilly-sur-Seine. From the age of fifteen he received weekly lessons in harmony, counterpoint, and orchestration from Rimsky-Korsakov. A year later his First Symphony was performed by Balakirev in St. Petersburg. The work showed so much maturity that the music publisher Belaiev arranged to publish Glazunov's works, and took him to Weimar where he met Liszt. From that time until 1906 (after which time he wrote mainly for special occasions) Glazunov composed music for all genres except opera. He took up a position as instructor in composition and orchestration at the St. Petersburg Conservatory in 1899, but resigned temporarily during the revolutionary turmoil of 1905 in protest against the dismissal of Rimsky-Korsakov by the government authorities. He returned later that year after full autonomy was granted to the Conservatory, and was elected director. He left Russia in 1928, and in the remaining years of his life conducted in the U.S. Glazunov was one of the greatest masters of counterpoint among Russian composers, but he avoided extreme polyphonic complexity. His music is unmistakably nationalistic in spirit.
GODARD, BENJAMIN LOUIS PAUL (1849-1895)
French composer and violist. He left a large number of works, his chamber music dating mainly from among his early compositions. He was most successful when writing for strings.

GODEFROID, DIEUDONNÉ JOSEPH GUILLAUME FELIX (1818-1897)
Belgian harpist, pianist and composer. He published many solo pieces for harp, and a teaching method which is still used.

GOLDSMARK, CARL (1830-1915)
Hungarian Jewish composer. He lived in Vienna, and was largely self-taught. He was an enthusiastic supporter of Wagner, and instigated the founding of the Vienna Wagner Verein. For a short time he was Sibelius’s teacher. Goldmark’s musical language was shaped by Hungarian folk culture, his memories of the synagogue, and various influences from the Romantics to the Impressionists. Among his compositions are the opera The Queen of Sheba, chamber works, the Rustic Wedding Symphony, and a Violin Concerto.

GOLTERMANN, GEORG EDUARD (1824-1898)
German cellist, conductor and composer. He first studied the cello with A. C. Prell, one of Romberg’s last pupils and later studied in Munich, with Joseph Menter (cello) and Ignaz Lachner (composition). He took up a position as music director in Würzburg in 1852, but moved one year later to Frankfurt, where he became Kapellmeister of the Theatre. Goltermann is remembered chiefly for his solo cello works: eight Concertos, Sonatas, Suites, Duos and over fifty salon pieces, many of them opera transcriptions. In addition he composed a symphony, three Overtures, Lieder and organ preludes.

GOUNOD, CHARLES FRANÇOIS (1818-1893)
Famous French composer, born at St. Cloud and died in Paris. His early education was supervised by his mother, his father having died when Gounod was still a small child. In 1836 he entered the Paris Conservatoire, studying with Halévy, Lesueur, and Paër. One year later he won the 2nd Prix de Rome with his cantata Marie Stuart et Rizzio, and in 1839 took the Grand Prix with his cantata Fernand. He achieved only moderate recognition with his first opera Sapho, but was overwhelmingly successful in 1859 with his great masterpiece Faust, after Goethe. This proved to be the most successful French opera of the nineteenth-century, acclaimed all over the world. The opera Roméo et Juliette was also received with universal praise. Gounod wrote a number of religious works, two Symphonies, three String Quartets, piano pieces and songs. Among his literary works were Ascanio de Saint-Saëns (1889); Le Don Juan de Mozart (1890), and an autobiography, Mémoires d’un artiste (Published posthumously, Paris, 1896).
GRÄDENNER, KARL GEORG PETER (1812-1883)
German cellist and composer, born in Rostock and died in Hamburg. He studied cello with Mattstedt. From 1838 he was music director at Kiel University, and in 1851 established an Academy for vocal music in Hamburg. He later went to Vienna, but returned to Hamburg and became a teacher at the Conservatory there. Grädener was also co-founder and president of the Hamburger Tonkünstlerverein. His compositions include two operas, orchestral works, chamber music and piano pieces. In addition he wrote a theoretical work, System der Harmonielehre (Hamburg, 1877), and his articles for music periodicals were collected and published as a Gesammelte Aufsätze (Hamburg, 1872).

GRAMMANN, KARL (CARL) (1844-1897)
German composer, born in Lübeck and died in Dresden. After studying at the Leipzig Conservatory, he settled in Dresden in 1885. He achieved some success with his operas Melusine, Thusnelda und der Triumphzug des Germanicus, Das Andreasfest, Ingrid and Das Irrlicht. He also composed several cantatas, Symphonies, String Quartets, Violin Sonatas, and other chamber music works.

GRANDVAL, Viscountess MARIE FÉLICIE DE (1830-1907)
French composer, born in Saint-Rémy-des-Monts (Sarthe) and died in Paris. She studied composition with Flotow and Saint-Saëns, and wrote her own compositions under various pen names. Among her works were songs, oratorios, operas and large-scale orchestral works.

GRÉGOIR, JOSEPH (1817-1876)
Belgian pianist and composer. After the Revolution of 1830 he went to Paris to study the piano with Henri Herz. He won enormous success as a concert pianist, and also as conductor of the Antwerp Theater orchestra. Grégoir became the music teacher at the English school in Bruges, and during this time made several European tours, performing in Germany with the cellist A. F. Servais. With Servais he collaborated in a number of compositions for cello and piano.

GRIEG, EDVARD HAGERUP (1843-1907)
The most important Norwegian composer of the Nationalist-Romantic period. Schumann's music was a starting point for him, but he later became interested in Norwegian folk music, and cherished the idea of developing a Norwegian musical style. Wagner also influenced him, but mostly Grieg distanced himself from his music. He was essentially a miniaturist, whose use of chromaticism was highly individual.

GRIMM, KARL (CARL) (1819-1888)
German cellist, born in Hildburghausen and died in Freiburg. For fifty years he was principal cellist at the Wiesbaden Opera. Grimm composed many cello pieces, some of which attained considerable popularity in his lifetime.
GRUND, FRIEDRICH WILHELM (1791-1874)
German conductor and composer, born in Hamburg. He studied cello, but chose to pursue a career as a conductor. In 1819, he founded in Hamburg the Gesellschaft der Freude des Religiösen Gesanges, which later became the Hamburg Singakademie. In 1828, he was engaged to work with the newly established Philharmonic Concerts, and remained in this post until 1862. In 1867 he organized (with Karl Grädener) the Hamburg Tonkünstlerverein. Grund wrote several operas, a cantata, some chamber music, and many piano pieces, which enjoyed considerable success and were praised by Schumann.

GRÜNFELD, HEINRICH (1865-1931)
Renowned cellist, born in Prague and died in Berlin. He studied with Hegenbarth at the Prague Conservatory, then went to Vienna where he was solo cellist at the comic opera. In 1876 he went to Berlin and taught cello at Kullak's Academy. Grünfeld undertook concert tours in Germany, Austria and Russia with his brother Alfred, and played chamber music with Xaver Scharwenka and Gustav Holland. He was praised everywhere for his beauty of tone and tasteful interpretations. He published a book of memoirs, In Dur und Moll. (Berlin, 1924).

GRÜTZMACHER, FRIEDRICH WILHELM LUDWIG (1832-1903)
Renowned German cellist, born in Dessau and died in Dresden. At the age of sixteen he went to Leipzig, where he created such a fine impression that he became principal cellist of the Gewandhaus Orchestra. In 1860 he went to Dresden, where he remained for more than forty years. Grützmacher achieved fame as a chamber music player and teacher, and numbered many well-known cellists among his pupils. He made numerous arrangements for cello of works by classical composers, as well as editing cello works by Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Chopin, and Schumann. In addition he wrote a Cello Concerto, several books of cello studies, and a Hohe Schule des Violoncellspiels.

GRÜTZMACHER, LEOPOLD (1835-1900)
Born in Dessau and died in Weimar. A cellist and brother of Friedrich Grützmacher, he studied in Dessau, and later joined the Gewandhaus Orchestra in Leipzig. He held a variety of orchestral positions, and eventually settled in Weimar as a teacher at the court chapel. Grützmacher wrote two Cello Concertos and a number of salon pieces for his instrument.

GUilmant, FéLIX ALEXANDER (1837-1911)
Eminent French organist and composer, born in Boulogne and died in Meudon, near Paris. He studied organ with his father, Jean-Baptiste Guilmand, and took harmony lessons with Gustave Carulli in Boulogne. From the age of twenty he taught at the Boulogne Conservatoire and conducted choral concerts. Guilmand was appointed organist of Ste. Trinité, where he remained for thirty years. In 1894 he was one of the founders of the Schola Cantorum. He appeared as organ soloist all over Europe and in the U.S., as well as being professor at the Paris Conservatoire. He was a virtuoso of the first rank, and a master in the art of improvisation. Among his students were René Vierné, Nadia Boulanger, and Marcel Dupré. He was a prolific composer of works for organ, and a distinguished editor.
HAäG, JACOB ADOLPH (1850-1928)
Swedish composer, born in Oestergarn and died in Hudiksvall. He was a remote relative of Gustav Wilhelm Hägg (an eminent organist and composer). He studied at the Stockholm Conservatory, then received a stipend to take courses in Denmark with Gade, who greatly influenced his style of composition. He also studied piano with Anton Door in Vienna, and music theory with Kiel in Berlin. Hägg suffered from mental instability and spent fifteen years in a sanatorium (1880-95). Upon his recovery he retired to the country, reducing his activity to a minimum. Despite his illness he left a considerable legacy of works, among them five Symphonies (of which the Nordische Symphonie was the best known), three Overtures, a Cello Sonata and other chamber music, piano pieces and songs.

HALÉVY, JACQUES FRANÇOIS FROMENTAL ELIE (1799-1862)
The French composer Jacques Halévy is best known for his opera La Juive (The Jewess, 1835). He studied with Luigi Cherubini at the Paris Conservatoire, and later taught there (from 1827). Among his pupils were Charles Gounod and Georges Bizet, who became his son-in-law. Halévy composed more than thirty operas, mostly on a grand scale. His other works include ballets, choral music, and some piano pieces.

HAMERIK (HAMMERICH), ASGER (1843-1923)
Danish composer, born in Copenhagen and died in Frederiksborg. He studied with Gade in Copenhagen and with Hans von Bülow in Berlin. In 1866 he accompanied Berlioz to Vienna and studied orchestration with him, and was probably Berlioz’s only pupil. Hamerik received a gold medal for his work Hymne de la Paix, at the contest for the Paris Exposition. He achieved some success with his operas, and was subsequently invited to become director of the newly organized Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore. He held the position in Baltimore for twenty six years, until 1898, when he returned to Copenhagen. While in Baltimore he wrote a number of symphonic works, which he conducted with the Conservatory orchestra.

HÄNSEL, PETER (1770-1831)
Born in northern Silesia and died of cholera in Vienna. He acquired his basic training in the violin from an uncle in Warsaw, and composition from Joseph Haydn in Vienna where he settled in 1791, the year of Mozart’s death and Czerny’s birth. There he came into contact with Princess Lubomirksa, who employed him in 1803, and most probably played alongside him on her estates in Galicia. Many of Hänsel’s string quartets — most if which were published in groups of three — contain polonaises, which was a rarity in the chamber music of the time. He was a prolific composer of chamber music, whose works include four String Quintets, fifty-five String Quartets, three Wind Quartets, six Trios, and pieces for keyboard. His compositional style was conservative, and his works were widely performed in Germany.

HARRADEN, R. ETHEL
Her compositions include chamber music, vocal and operatic works, written in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.
HARTOG, EDOUARD DE (1829-1909)
Dutch pianist and composer. He was born in Amsterdam, but spent the greater part of his life as a teacher and performer in Paris (1852-1900). In his compositions he developed an individual style, independent of Mendelssohn's influence, gaining the reputation of being one of the first Dutch composers to do so. Among his works are operas, Symphonic Poems, choral works, solo Piano Sonatas, chamber music and lieder. Hartog returned to The Hague in 1900, where he remained until his death.

HASLINGER, CARL (1816-1868)
Austrian publisher and composer. His firm was originally known as Tobias Haslingers Witwe und Sohn until 1948, when it became Carl Haslinger quondam Tobias. He studied composition with Czerny and Seyfried, but never published any music of note.

HASLINGER, TOBIAS (1787-1842)
Austrian publisher. The firm was founded in 1803 as the Chemische Druckerey by Alois Senefelder and then taken over by S. A. Steiner, with whom Tobias Haslinger went into partnership. He later acquired the sole rights, and took over the firm in his own name. He gave it a worldwide reputation, and was responsible, among other things, for the fine edition of Beethoven's collected works (62 volumes). Haslinger became known as a composer by publishing his own music.

HAUSER, Miska (1822-1887)
Austrian violinist, born in Pressburg (Bratislava), and died in Vienna. He studied with Kreutzer in Vienna, and traveled as a child prodigy in Europe. During the years 1853-58 he made a grand tour of America and Australia. Hauser wrote an operetta, and numerous violin pieces, of which his Rapsodie hongroise and Lieder ohne Worte enjoyed popularity, as did the American Rhapsody for Violin and Piano (1855). During his American tour he maintained a correspondence with the Ostdeutsche Post, which was collected and published in two volumes, Aus dem Wanderbuch eines österreichischen Virtuosen (Leipzig, 1858-59). Some of these reports were translated into English and can be found in History of Music in San Francisco (San Francisco, 1939).

HAYDN, FRANZ JOSEF (1732-1809)
Franz Josef Haydn was born at Rohrau, Lower Austria, and was one of the great composers of the Classical period. Most renowned for reshaping the established forms of the symphony and string quartet into powerfully expressive forms, he also contributed to the development of the piano sonata. Haydn composed most of his works while employed as court composer at the estate of the Esterhazy family. His output was enormous, comprising twenty-five operas, one hundred and seven Symphonies, eighty-three String Quartets, and numerous other works. For a brief period Haydn taught Beethoven in Vienna, and Beethoven remained a great admirer of his works. Haydn's development of the sonata form in the symphonies and string quartets had a profound influence on Mozart and Beethoven.
HEBERLEIN, HERMANN (1858-?)
Born in Marckneukirchen, in the kingdom of Saxony, he was a pupil of Emil Hegar who had himself studied under Carl Schröder and Bernhard Cossmann. He studied at the Leipzig Conservatory between the years 1873-1877, and shortly afterwards was appointed to the position of solo cellist at the town theatre of Königsberg. In 1883 Heberlein became cello teacher at the music school there. He wrote several volumes of cello studies, as well as cello pieces and a Violoncello School.

HEGYESI (real name SPITZER), LOUIS; (1853-1894)

HEISE, PETER ARNOLD (1830-1879)
Danish composer. Apart from a brief period of study in Leipzig, he spent most of his life in Copenhagen. His chief importance is as a composer of songs.

HELLER, STEPHEN (1813-1886)
Celebrated Hungarian pianist and composer, he was born in Pest and died in Paris. He was of a Jewish family, but converted to Christianity as a youth. He studied piano with F. Brauer and showed such outstanding ability that he was sent to Vienna to continue his studies with Carl Czerny and Anton Halm. In 1838 he went to Paris, where he became friendly with Berlioz, Chopin, and Liszt. Heller succeeded there as both pianist and composer, acquiring a reputation on a par with Chopin's. His piano works were somewhat akin to Schumann's: brilliant salon dances, studies, and character pieces that became exceedingly popular. In 1849 he visited London, where he again met with immediate success. A nervous ailment forced him to curtail his appearances, but he returned in 1862 and played with Halé at the Crystal Palace. He spent the remainder of his life in Paris, performing and composing. Heller wrote several hundred piano pieces, arranged in one hundred and fifty-eight opus numbers; of these, the most effective are Traumbilder; Promenades d'un solitaire; Nuits blanches; Dans les bois; Voyage autour de ma chambre; Tablettes d'un solitaire; Tarentelles.

HENKEL, HEINRICH (1822-1899)
German pianist, born at Fulda and died in Frankfurt. He was a pupil of his father, and studied further under Aloys Schmitt. In 1849 he settled in Frankfurt as a teacher. He published a piano method, Vorschule des Klavierspiels, piano pieces and songs.
HENSELT, ADOLPH VON (1814-1889)
Distinguished German pianist and composer, born in Schwabach and died in Warmbrunn. In 1831, an allowance from King Ludwig I enabled him to study piano with Hummel at Weimar, which he followed up with a course of theory under Sechter in Vienna. In 1838 he went to St. Petersburg, where he established himself as a piano teacher. Henselt was appointed chamber pianist to the Empress, and inspector of music in principal Russian cities. He remained in Russia for forty years, and was responsible for training a generation of Russian pianists. He was a fine virtuoso, with a highly individual style of playing. His piano compositions were praised by Schumann and Liszt, who became his personal friend. His principal works are a Piano Concerto, two sets of Études, and a number of piano pieces. He also published a paper entitled Instructions for Teaching of Playing the Fortepiano (in Russian; St. Petersburg, 1868).

HÉROLD, LOUIS JOSEPH FERDINAND (1791-1833)
French composer, pianist and opera chorus-master, whose music was immensely popular during his lifetime. Hérold studied at the Paris Conservatoire with Louis Adam, Rodolph Kreutzer and Étienne Méhul. In 1812 he was awarded the Prix de Rome. Hérold composed some of the finest examples of opéra comique, including Zampa (1831), and Le Pré aux Clercs (1832). Besides his many works for the stage, Hérold composed four Piano Concertos, two Symphonies, chamber works including three String Quartets, and many works for piano solo including ten Sonatas.

HERVEY, ARTHUR (1855-1922)
Composer and writer, born (of Irish parentage) in Paris and died in London. At first he entered the diplomatic service, but embraced a career in music in 1880. He was a critic for Vanity Fair (1889-92), and from 1892-1908 served on the staff of the London Morning Post.

HERZ, HENRI (1803-1888)
Brilliant Austrian pianist, born in Vienna and died in Paris. He was taught by his father, and by Hünten at Coblenz, and later by Pradher, Reicha, and Douren at the Paris Conservatoire. He gained a reputation as a fashionable teacher and composer. He undertook concert tours in Germany and England, appearing with the violinist Lafont, and pianists Moscheles and Cramer. In 1842, he was appointed piano professor at the Paris Conservatoire. After suffering financial losses through partnership with a piano manufacturer, Klepfer, he went on a concert tour through the U.S., Mexico, and the West Indies (1845-51). On his return he established a successful piano factory, and resigned his professorship at the Conservatoire. Herz acknowledged that he courted the popular taste. His numerous compositions (over two hundred) include piano works and chamber music. He also published a vividly descriptive book, Mes voyages en Amérique (1866), a reprint of his letters to the Moniteur Universal.

HERZOGENBERG, HEINRICH VON (1843-1900)
Austrian composer, and a lifelong friend of Brahms, who influenced his music. He founded the Bach Society in Leipzig. Though his compositions possess little originality, they are well written and make excellent use of instrumental color. Among his works are sonatas, pieces for piano four-hands, and piano solo.
HIGGS, HENRY MARCELLUS (1808-1856)
Violist of exceptional ability, who specialized in the performance of chamber music. In 1848 he played the solo viola part in the first London performance of Berlioz’s Harold in Italy.

HILLER, FERDINAND (1811-1885)
Distinguished German conductor and composer, born in Frankfurt and died in Cologne. He came from a wealthy Jewish family, and received a fine education. Hiller studied piano with Aloys Schmitt, and later went to Weimar to study with Hummel. From 1823–35 he lived in Paris and became a friend of Chopin, Liszt, Berlioz, and many other celebrated musicians. After his father’s death in 1836, he returned to Frankfurt, where he conducted the concerts of the Cäcilien-Verein. He then went to Italy, where he wrote an oratorio, Die Zerstörung Jerusalems. This work aroused the interest of Mendelssohn, who invited Hiller to Leipzig. He subsequently conducted in Düsseldorf, Cologne and Dresden, where he staged his operas Der Traum in der Christnacht (1843) and Konradin (Oct. 13, 1847). Hiller founded the Cologne Conservatory, and was its first director until his death. He also conducted the Lower Rhine Festival, and received invitations to conduct in Paris, London, and St. Petersburg. His association with Mendelssohn and Spohr, combined with his classical training, influenced his musical development, which was in direct conflict with Wagner. He wrote three more operas, an Oratorio, Cantatas, three Symphonies, three Piano Concertos, five String Quartets, five Piano Quartets, five Piano Trios, choral works, Lieder and piano music. He was also a highly respected critic.

HOFFMAN, HEINRICH KARL JOHANN (1842-1902)
German-born composer, whose works include an Octet for strings and wind, and a String Sextet. His compositions enjoyed great popularity during his lifetime.

HOL, RICHARD (1825-1904)
Dutch composer, conductor, pianist, and organist, born in Amsterdam and died in Utrecht. He studied organ with Martens and theory with Bertelmann. For a time he taught music in Amsterdam, before becoming city music director in Utrecht. He also held the positions of cathedral organist, and director of the School of Music. Hol was a prolific composer, who wrote operas, Symphonies, choral works, chamber music and Lieder.

HOLLAENDER, GUSTAV (1855-1915)
German violinist, born in Leobschütz, Silesia, and died in Berlin. He studied at the Leipzig Conservatory with Ferdinand David, and in Berlin with Joachim. At the age of twenty he embarked on a concert career, appearing in concerts of chamber music with Scharwenka and Grünfeld in Berlin (1878–81). In 1881 he was appointed to teach at the Cologne Conservatory, and in 1894 became director of the Stern Conservatory in Berlin, where he remained until his death. Hollaender composed numerous pieces for violin, in virtuoso style.
HOLLAENDER, VICTOR (1866-1940)
German composer, brother of Gustav Hollaender, born in Leobschütz and died in Hollywood. He studied with Kullak, then worked as a theater conductor in Berlin and London for a number of years. In 1933 he went to America and settled in Los Angeles. His works include light opera, Lieder and piano pieces.

HOLLMAN, JOSEPH (1852-1927)
Dutch cellist, born in Maastricht and died in Paris. He studied with Servais at the Brussels Conservatory, and then at the Paris Conservatoire with Jacquard. Hollman appeared frequently in Europe and America, although he lived mostly in Paris. Saint-Saëns wrote his second Cello Concerto for him.

HORSLEY, CHARLES EDWARD (1822-1876)
English composer, the son of William Horsley. His early musical training came from his father and Ignaz Moscheles. In his youth he became an admirer of Mendelssohn, and the latter's influence is very pronounced in his compositions.

HOWELL, EDWARD (1846-1898)
British cellist, who studied with Piatti, and enjoyed a fine career as performer and teacher. He joined the Covent Garden Theatre Orchestra, and later became principal cellist of the Royal Italian Opera, a position he held for many years. He taught at all the major schools of music in London, and took part in the first British performance of Poppet's Requiem for three Cellos, playing alongside the composer.

HUBER, HANS (1852-1921)
Swiss composer, pianist and teacher. His musical instruction came from Carl Munzinger. He settled in Basel and taught in the music school there. Huber was possibly the most important Swiss composer of the nineteenth-century. Many of his compositions are for the piano.

HÜLLEWŒCK, FERDINAND (1824-1887)
German violinist and teacher, born at Dessau, and died at Blasewitz. He studied under Franz Schneider. The major part of his career was in Dresden where he was leader of the Dresden Orchestra and violin professor in the Dresden Conservatory, retiring in 1886. His compositions include a number of educational violin works.

HUMMEL, FERDINAND (1855-1928)
German composer, harpist and pianist. He was a child prodigy, and appeared in public as a harpist at the age of seven. His compositions amount to approximately one hundred and twenty opus numbers.
HUMMEL, JOHANN NEPOMUK (1778-1837)
Johann Nepomuk Hummel was born in Pressburg, now Bratislava. His contemporaries held him to be one of Europe’s great composers, and perhaps its greatest pianist. At age seven he went to Vienna, where he made such an impression on Mozart that the latter accepted him as a student. He later studied with Haydn and Salieri. In 1804 he became Kapellmeister to Prince Esterhazy, and subsequently accepted posts as conductor in Stuttgart and Weimar. Hummel’s writings include seven Piano Concertos and other works for the piano, nine operas, chamber music, and choral works. His compositions stand on the borderline between epochs, linking the styles of Clementi and Mozart with those of Schubert, Mendelssohn and Chopin.

HÜNTEM, FRANZ (1793-1878)
German pianist and composer, born in Coblenz. He studied with his father, who was an organist. Later he went to Paris and took courses at the Conservatoire with Pradher (piano) and Cherubini (composition). He composed salon music for piano, with which he achieved some success. In addition he published a Méthode nouvelle pour le piano, and other pedagogic works which became popular among teachers and students. Hünten was much in demand as a piano teacher in Paris. He returned to Coblenz in 1848, where he remained until his death.

HUS-DESFORGES, PIERRE LOUIS (1773-1838)
French cellist, and composer, born at Toulon and died at Pont-le-Voy, near Blois. In his youth he played the trumpet in the 14th Regiment in order to join in the campaigns of the Revolutionary Army. He lost the fourth finger of his right hand in an accident, and thereafter took up the cello. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire, and subsequently led a varied life as a theatrical conductor, orchestral cellist, and teacher in France and Russia. In 1820 he founded a music school at Metz. He was the author of Méthode de violoncelle à l’usage des commençants (Paris, 1828), and wrote four Cello Concertos, a String Quartet, and a Sinfonia Concertante with Violin and Cello obbligato. He also published a historical novel, Sapho à Leucade (Paris, 1818).

D’INDY, VINCENT (1851-1931)
Eminent French composer, born in Paris. From 1862-65 he studied piano with Diémer, and later took harmony and theory lessons with Marmontel and Lavignac. During the Franco-Prussian War he served in the Garde Mobile, and wrote about his experiences. He then studied composition with César Franck (1872-80), joining his organ class in 1873. For a number of years he held various posts as organist, chorus-master and timpanist, before becoming president of the Société Nationale de Musique. In 1894 he founded, with Bordes and Guilmant, the famous Schola Cantorum, primarily as a school for plainchant and the Palestrina style, but gradually expanding to include all musical disciplines. D’Indy’s fame as a composer began with the performance of Le Chant de la cloche at a Lamoureux concert in 1886, and from that point on he was recognized as one of the most important of modern French masters. In 1892 he was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, and an Officer in 1912. Both as teacher and artist, d’Indy continued the traditions of César Franck. He wrote music for almost every genre, but had his greatest success with larger instrumental forms.
IVIMEY, JOHN WILLIAM (1868-?)
English organist. His works include a Piano Trio Op. 1.

JACOBOWSKY, HERMANN (1846-?)
Born at Neustrelitz, he learned piano from his father. At the age of sixteen he began to study the cello and went to Berlin in order to take lessons with Griebel. In 1864 he became solo cellist in the Liebig "Symphonie Kapelle." Six years later he was summoned to Jassy as teacher of cello at the music school, but at the outbreak of the Franco-German War he left to take part in the campaign. After the war he received a place as Chamber Musician in the Royal orchestra. Besides some Drawing-room Pieces for Violoncello, he published Tonleiterübungen in fünf Stufen and twenty-two Elementary Exercises in the first position.

JACQUARD, LEON JEAN (1826-1886)
Born in Paris, he took cello lessons with Hus-Desforges and Levacq, before entering the Conservatoire, where he studied with Norblin. Jacquard enjoyed the reputation of a virtuoso, as well as being much appreciated as an orchestral player and chamber musician. In 1877 he was appointed teacher in the Conservatoire as Chevillard’s successor.

JENSEN, ADOLF (1837-1879)
German pianist and composer. He was born in the East Prussian city of Königsberg, and died in Baden-Baden at the age of forty-two. An admirer of Wagner and Schumann, his works were highly regarded during his lifetime, but are unjustly neglected today. Lieder comprises the bulk of his output, which also includes a substantial body of piano music, as well as an opera and cantatas. The lieder in particular were widely performed and appreciated. Jensen was primarily a miniaturist whose works merit revival.

JENSEN, GUSTAV (1843-1895)
German violinist and composer. He was the brother of Adolf Jensen. From 1872 he was a teacher at the Cologne Conservatory. In addition to his work as a composer and teacher, he also edited collections of old music.

JIRANEK, JOSEF (1855-1940)
Bohemian violinist and pedagogue, born in Ludec and died in Prague. He studied music with Sketanka, who legally adopted him, then took violin lessons with A. Hrimaly and harp lessons with Stanek. He was also a proficient pianist. Between 1877 and 1891 he lived in Russia and held several teaching positions there. As well as a teaching guide in Russian entitled Musical Grammar, Jiranek published a number of useful piano manuals in German. Upon his return to Prague he taught piano at the Conservatory from 1891-1923. He composed mainly orchestral works and chamber music.
JONCIÈRES, VICTORIN DE (real name Felix Rossignol) (1839-1903)
French composer, born in Paris. He was originally a student of painting, but was devoted to music. At the age of twenty he produced a light opera for a student performance and, encouraged by its success with the critics, began to study music seriously. He studied first with Elwart, then with Leborne at the Paris Conservatoire. He was a great admirer of Wagner, and when Leborne expressed his opposition to Wagner, Joncières immediately left his class. His works include an opera, a Symphony, and a Violin Concerto.

KÄANU, JINDRICH Z. (1852-1926)
Czech teacher, administrator, pianist and composer of Galician origin. He became well known as a piano virtuoso, and taught at the Prague Conservatory. Käänu helped to popularize Smetana and other Czech composers through his piano transcriptions.

KALKBRENNER, FRIEDRICH WILHELM MICHAEL (1785-1849)
Celebrated German pianist, born near Kassel and died in Deuil, Seine-et-Oise, he was taught by his father Christian Kalkbrenner. From 1799-1801 he was enrolled at the Paris Conservatoire, where he studied with Adam and Nicodami (piano) and Catel (harmony), taking the first prizes in 1801. From 1803 he studied counterpoint with Albrechtsberger in Vienna. Kalkbrenner appeared as a concert pianist throughout Germany and in Paris, with great success. As a teacher, too, he was highly regarded, so much so that Chopin considered studying with him. He spent the years 1814-23 in London, after which time he settled in Paris as a partner in the Pleyel piano factory. Kalkbrenner had considerable success with his method of teaching, which aimed at the independent development of the fingers and wrist. His method of octave playing became a standard of modern piano teaching. He also developed left-hand technique, and a proper management of the pedals. His own playing, however, lacked emotional power. His numerous études (among them several for left hand alone) are of considerable interest and value.

KALLIWODA, JAN VACLAV (1801-1866)
Famous Bohemian violinist and composer, born in Prague and died in Karlsruhe. He studied at the Prague Conservatory with Pixis (violin) and Dionys Weber (composition), and later played in the Prague Orchestra. In 1822 he became conductor of Prince Fürstenberg's orchestra in Donaueschingen, where he spent thirty years, eventually retiring to Karlsruhe. He was highly regarded by his contemporaries, and Schumann in particular praised some of his music.

KETTERER, EUGENE (1831-1870)
French pianist and composer, born in Rouen and died in Paris. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire. His publications include two hundred and ninety piano pieces in salon style, many of which became popular.
KIEL, FRIEDRICH (1821-1885)
German music pedagogue and composer, born in Puderbach, near Siegen and died in Berlin. He studied the rudiments of music with his father, a schoolmaster. One of his early compositions attracted the attention of Prince Karl von Wittgenstein, who gave him violin lessons, and took him into his orchestra. Kiel studied further with Kaspar Kummer at Coburg, becoming leader of the ducal orchestra there. He then moved to Berlin where he studied with Dehn. In 1865 he was elected to the Prussian Academy of Fine Arts, and became a teacher of composition at the Stern Conservatory in Berlin. He was a prolific composer, his works including several Oratorios, Piano Trios and Piano Sonatas, but it was as a pedagogue that he gained recognition.

KIRCHNER, THEODOR (1823-1903)
Distinguished German composer, born in Neukirchen, near Chemnitz, and died in Hamburg. On Mendelssohn’s advice, he studied in Leipzig with K. F. Becker (theory) and J. Knorr (piano), and with Johann Schneider in Dresden. He was organist at Winterthur for twenty years, and then taught at the Zürich Music School. Before returning to Leipzig he held the post of director of the Würzburg Conservatory. Kirchner wrote about ninety piano works, in the style of Schumann, who encouraged and advised him in his youth. He also wrote chamber music, and made numerous transcriptions for piano solo and piano duet.

KLENGEL, JULIUS (1859-1933)
German cellist and composer. His reputation was that of a cellist with a fine technique and a pure tone. He was principal cellist of the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra from 1881-1924, and Royal Professor at the Leipzig Conservatory. One of the great teachers of the period, his pupils included Suggia, Feuermann and Piatiogorsky. He wrote extensively for the cello.

KOSSMALY, CARL (1812-1893)
German composer and conductor, born in Breslau and died in Stettin. Kossmaly studied in Berlin with Berger, Zelter, and Klein, and then was chorus master at various German theaters. He settled in Stettin as a teacher and conductor. He published several books, and contributed articles to music periodicals. In addition he wrote orchestral, instrumental and vocal works.

KREUZ, EMIL (1867-1932)
German violinist, born at Elberfeld. He studied under Japha and Holmes, and took a special interest in playing the viola, on which he appeared as soloist in London in 1888. Later he became a member of the Gompertz Quartet and of the Covent Garden Opera Orchestra. His compositions include a Concerto for viola, and a Trio for piano, violin and viola.

KRUFFT, BARON NICOLAS VON (1779-1818)
He was a diplomat and amateur musician, who learned the piano at an early age with his mother, later studying harmony and composition with Albrechtsberger. He is described by Fétis as a distinguished amateur musician, and among his compositions are three String Quartets, Sonatas for piano solo and piano four-hands, a Cello Sonata, Preludes and Fugues for piano, and forty-eight Lieder.
KRUG, DIETRICH (1821-1880)
German music teacher, born in Hamburg. He wrote studies for the piano, and published a Method.

KÜCKEN, FRIEDRICH WILHELM (1810-1882)
German conductor and composer, born in Bleckede and died in Schwerin. He studied with his brother-in-law, Lührss, an organist, and with Aron at Schwerin. In 1832 he went to Berlin, where he studied counterpoint with Brinbach. Kücken worked as a choral conductor in Switzerland before becoming Kapellmeister in Stuttgart, a post which he held for ten years. He is most noted for his Lieder, but also wrote several operas and chamber music.

KULLAK, THEODOR (1818-1882)
Famous German pianist and pedagogue, born in Krotoschin and died in Berlin. In 1837 he went to Berlin to study medicine, but also studied music there with Dehn. Later he went to Vienna, where he took lessons with Czerny. Returning to Berlin in 1846, he became court pianist to the King of Prussia. In 1850 he founded a Conservatory in Berlin in partnership with Julius Stern and Bernhard Marx, however they disagreed, and Kullak established his own school, the Neue Akademie der Tonkunst. This Academy prospered and became famous. He published valuable pedagogic works and various character pieces for piano.

KUMMER, FRIEDRICH AUGUST (1797-1879)
German cellist and composer. He studied with Friedrich Dotzauer, and took over the latter’s position as first cellist in the Dresden Orchestra. He maintained an active career as soloist, quartet and orchestral player, as well as teacher at the Dresden Conservatory. Along with Dotzauer and Friedrich Gürtzmacher he was responsible for the fine reputation of Dresden cellists in the nineteenth-century. About half his compositions involve the cello, either as solo instrument, or with a prominent role in chamber music. He also published a Violoncello School, and a compendium of orchestral excerpts. Kummer’s reputation was that of a cellist of great integrity, without being a virtuoso. A distinguished teacher, Cossman and Goltermann were among his students.

LACHNER, IGNAZ (1807-1895)
German organist, conductor, and composer. He was a member of a distinguished musical family, his brothers Franz and Vincenz being also well-known composers. He studied music with his father, and in 1824 joined his brother Franz in Vienna, where he became an assistant conductor at the Kärnthner Theater. From there he went on to the Vienna Court Opera, and later to Stuttgart as court music director. After holding a number of conducting posts he eventually settled in Frankfurt as a music director. His compositions include operas, ballets, Symphonies, chamber and piano music.
LACHNER, VINCENZ (1811-1893)
German organist, conductor, and composer, born in Rain-am-Lech and died in Karlsruhe. He first studied with his father, and later in Vienna with his brothers Franz and Ignaz, succeeding Ignaz as organist and Franz as conductor at the Kärnthertor Theater there. Lachner concentrated on operatic conducting, and in 1873 settled in Karlsruhe, where he joined the faculty of the Conservatory in 1884. His four-part male choruses are celebrated, and he also wrote orchestral and chamber music, and numerous Lieder.

LACK, THÉODORE (1846-1921)
French pianist and composer, born in Quimper, Finistère, and died in Paris. A precocious musician, Lack became organist of his village church when he was only ten years old. At fourteen he entered the Paris Conservatoire, where he studied piano with Marmontel, harmony with Bazin, and theory with Lefébure-Wély. Lack was appointed piano instructor there at the age of eighteen, and held this position for fifty-seven years (1864-1921) until his death. He wrote a great many salon pieces for piano.

LAFONT, CHARLES PHILIPPE (1781-1839)
French violinist and composer, born in Paris and died at Tarbes. He received his first violin instruction from his mother, then studied in Paris with Kreutzer and Rode. For several years he toured Europe, before becoming Rode’s successor at the Russian court in St. Petersburg in 1808. Lafont returned to Paris in 1815 as solo violinist to Louis XVIII. The following year he engaged in a violin-playing debate with Paganini in Milan. While on an extended tour with the pianist Henri Herz which began in 1831, Lafont was killed in a carriage accident in southern France. Among his compositions are seven Violin Concertos, and many other works for violin with various instrumental groups. In addition he composed about two hundred romances for voice, and two comic operas.

LAHEE, HENRY (1826-1912)
English pianist and composer, born in Chelsea and died in London. Lahee studied with Sterndale Bennett, C. Potter (piano), and J. Goss (composition). He was organist at Holy Trinity Church, Brompton (1847-74), as well as being a concert pianist. Best known for his madrigals and glees, he was also a member of the Philharmonic Society.

LALO, ÉDOUARD VICTOIRE ANTOINE (1812-1892)
French composer whose music, written in the late-romantic idiom, foreshadows the impressionist style. Lalo studied violin and viola at the Lille and Paris Conservatories, and in 1855 became violist of the Armingaud-Jacquard string quartet. The revival of interest in chamber music in France in the 1850’s owed much to Lalo’s influence, and his piano trios are considered some of the finest French examples of this genre. He achieved his first major success with the Symphonie Espagnole for violin and orchestra, performed by Pablo de Sarasate in 1875. Lalo was a skillful orchestrator, and among his large-scale works are a Symphony, and Concerti for violin, cello and piano. His other works include a ballet, opera, chamber music, and songs.
LANG, HENRY ALBERT (1854-1930)
American pianist, teacher, and composer, born (of German parents) in New Orleans and died in Philadelphia. He studied at the Stuttgart Conservatory, and taught piano at the Karlsruhe Conservatory, then at Riga and Königsberg. In 1890 he settled in Philadelphia, and taught at several music schools. Lang wrote orchestral music, chamber music and songs.

LASSEN, EDUARD (1830-1904)
Eminent Danish conductor and composer, born in Copenhagen and died at Weimar. He entered the Brussels Conservatory, taking the Belgian Prix de Rome in 1851. Following a tour through Germany and Italy, he went to Weimar, where Liszt encouraged the presentation of his five-act opera Landgraf Ludwigs Brautfahrt (1857). Lassen became court music director in Weimar in 1858, then spent thirty-five years as conductor of the Weimar Opera, where he gave the world premiere of Saint-Saëns's opera Samson et Dalila (Weimar, Dec. 2, 1877). He composed two operas, a ballet, two Symphonies, Overtures, a Cantata, and works for chorus and orchestra.

LASSERRE, JULES (1838-?)
Born at Tarbes, he studied at the Paris Conservatoire, where he won the Premier Prix. After travelling in France and Spain he settled in London, where he became first cellist in the "Musical Union," and in Costa's Orchestra. He wrote several works for his instrument.

LAUSKA, FRANZ SERAPHINUS (1764-1825)
Bohemian pianist and composer, born at Brünn and died in Berlin. Lauska studied in Vienna with Albrechtsberger, and from 1794-98 taught in Copenhagen. In 1798 he settled in Berlin, where he became a teacher at the court. Meyerbeer numbered among his pupils. Lauska composed many Sonatas (including one for cello) and pieces for piano solo.

LE BEAU, LUISE ADOLPHA
German pianist, who was a pupil of Rheinberger. Among her published compositions are a Piano Quartet, a Piano Trio, a Sonata for violin and piano, and a Sonata for cello and piano.

LECOCQ, ALEXANDRE CHARLES (1832-1918)
French composer of light opera, born in Paris. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire under Bazin, Halévy, and Boëstin. In 1857 he shared with Bizet a prize awarded by Offenbach for the best opéra buffa, with Le Docteur Miracle. From that time on, he composed industriously for the stage. Lecocq achieved fame in the 1870s with his operetta La Fille de Mme. Angot, which was performed continuously in Paris for over a year. Altogether, he produced some forty operettas and comic operas, not inferior to the productions of Offenbach and Hervé. He also published character pieces for piano, melodies and chansons for voice with piano, and sacred songs for women's voices.
LEE, LOUIS (1819-1896)
German cellist and composer, brother of Maurice and Sebastian Lee, born in Hamburg and died in Lübeck. He studied cello with J. N. Prell, appearing as a soloist by the age of twelve. He organized chamber music soirées in Hamburg, and taught at the Hamburg Conservatory until 1884, as well as being first cellist of the Philharmonic Society. Lee published chamber music, including works for cello and piano, some piano pieces, and incidental music to Schiller’s Jungfrau von Orleans and William Tell.

LEE, MAURICE (1821-1895)
German piano teacher, born in Hamburg and died in London. He was the brother of cellists Sebastian and Louis Lee. He spent the latter part of his life in London, where he gained a reputation as a piano teacher and composer of popular salon music.

LEE, SEBASTIAN (1805-1887)
German cellist and composer, born in Hamburg. He studied with J. N. Prell, and for over thirty years was solo cellist at the Opéra in Paris. Returning to Hamburg in 1868, he remained there until his death. Regarded as one of the finest cellists of the nineteenth-century, Lee published many compositions for his instrument, including works with orchestra, String Quartet, and piano. In addition he wrote cello duos and a fine cello teaching method.

LEFEBVRE, CHARLES ÉDOUARD (1843-1917)
French composer, born in Paris and died in Aix-les-Bains. Lefebvre studied at the Paris Conservatoire, and won the Premier Grand Prix de Rome in 1870 for his cantata Le Jugement de Dieu. In 1895 he joined the faculty of the Conservatoire. His compositions include operas, symphonies and chamber music.

LEHMANN, ROBERT (1841-1912)
German cellist, born in Silesia and died in Stettin. He studied organ and cello, and worked as a church organist and conductor. His publications include a series of waltzes for orchestra under the title Briehe aus Wien. In addition he wrote cello music, church music, and an autobiography, Erinnerungen eines Künstlers, published in 1895.

LEIBROCK, JOSEPH ADOLF (1808-1886)
German cellist and harpist, born at Braunschweig and died in Berlin. He studied in Berlin, and received his Ph. D. He played cello and harp in the court orchestra at Braunschweig. His compositions include music to Schiller’s Räuber, part-songs, arrangements for piano and cello, and a theoretical work, Musikalische Akkordenlehre.
LENÉPVEU, CHARLES FERDINAND (1840-1910)
French composer and pedagogue, born at Rouen and died in Paris. While a law student, he took cello lessons from Servais. He won first prize at Caen in 1861 for a cantata, and entered Ambroise Thomas's composition class at the Paris Conservatoire in 1863. Two years later he took the Grand Prix de Rome with the cantata Renaud dans les jardins d'Armide. His comic opera Le Florentin also won a prize and was performed at the Opéra-Comique in 1874. The grand opera Velléda was produced at Covent Garden in London (July 4, 1882), with Adelina Patti in the title role. In 1891 Lenépveu succeeded Guiraud as professor of harmony at the Conservatoire, becoming professor of composition two years later. In 1896 he was elected to Ambroise Thomas's chair in the Académie des Beaux-Arts. Lenépveu became a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, and an Officer of Public Instruction.

LENORMAND, RENÉ (1846-1932)
French composer, born in Elbeuf and died in Paris. He received his musical training from his mother, who was an excellent pianist. In 1868 he went to Paris, where he studied with Damcke. There he organized a society which he called Le Lied en Tous Pays. Besides his songs, Lenormand composed an opera, a Piano Concerto, and other orchestral works. He also published a valuable manual on harmony, Etude sur l'harmonie moderne (Paris 1912, English translation as A Study of Modern Harmony, London, 1915.)

LIBOTTON, GUSTAV (1842-1891)
Belgian cellist, who studied with Servais at the Brussels Conservatory. His first performance in St. Petersburg in 1864 caused a sensation. For a time he was professor of cello at the Brussels Conservatory, and in 1880 was appointed to the corresponding position at the Guildhall School of Music in London. Libotton appeared frequently as soloist in orchestral and chamber music concerts, but preferred the life of a teacher to that of performer. He died of tuberculosis at the age of forty-nine.

LINDLEY, ROBERT (1776-1855)
English cellist, born in Rotherham and died in London. He studied cello with Cervetto, and for almost sixty years (1794-1851) was first cellist at the Royal Opera in London. In 1822 he became professor of cello at the Royal Academy of Music. Lindley composed a number of pieces for his instrument.

LINDNER, RODERIC AUGUST (1820-1878)
German cellist, born in Dessau and died in Hannover. He studied with Drechsler, and in 1837 became first cellist in the court orchestra at Hannover. Lindner composed a Cello Concerto and numerous vocal pieces.

LISTE, ANTOINE (1774 -?)
German composer, born in Hildesheim. He went to Austria and studied with Mozart and Albrechtsberger. Among his compositions are solo Sonatas for piano, for cello, a Concerto for piano, and a series of lieder.
LISZT, FRANZ (FERENCZ) (1811-1886)
Franz Liszt, born in Raiding, Hungary, was the most celebrated pianist of the nineteenth-century. He was a child prodigy, whose compositions were extremely innovative. Liszt also created a new form, the Symphonic Poem, an orchestral work consisting of a single movement, based upon a literary program. The works of Liszt’s late years were misunderstood by his contemporaries, and contain many formal and harmonic innovations. These anticipate devices associated with Debussy, Ravel, Bartok, and the Austrian Expressionists. He was also a distinguished piano teacher, with students from all over Europe and the United States.

LITOLFF, HENRY CHARLES (1818-1891)
Pianist, composer, and publisher, born in London and died near Paris. He studied with Moscheles, and made his professional debut in London at fourteen. After his marriage (at the age of seventeen) he moved to Paris, where he attracted attention by his brilliant performances. Litolff travelled widely in Europe, but became implicated in the Revolution of 1848, so that he was compelled to flee Vienna. He acquired a music publishing business when he married the widow of the music publisher Meyer, and pioneered the publication of cheap editions of classical music (Collections Litolff). He later married for a third time (the Comtesse de Laroche-Foucauld), and after her death in 1870 he remarried to a girl of fifteen.

Litolff was a prolific composer, with over one hundred publications. Of these, the most famous are the Scherzo from the fourth Concerto Sinfonique, and the overture Robespierre, which contains a vivid description of Robespierre’s execution. He also wrote several operas, Oratorios and other large-scale orchestral works, chamber music, and piano pieces.

LOEWE, JOHANN CARL GOTTFRIED (1796-1869)
Outstanding German composer of lieder, born in Lübech, near Halle and died in Kiel. He was regarded by many musicians to be the greatest lieder composer between Schubert and Brahms. At the age of twelve he was sent to the Francke Institute in Halle, where he attracted the attention of Jerome Bonaparte. There he was taught by Türk, the head of the Institute. Loewe developed a highly dramatic and lyrical style of German ballade, a genre which he perfected. He was personally acquainted with Goethe, and his setting of Goethe’s poem Erlkönig (1818), is one of Loewe’s finest compositions. In 1820 he became a schoolmaster and organist in Stettin. He travelled frequently until 1866, when he settled in Kiel. Loewe was also was a fine singer, and he performed his works throughout Europe.

LONGHURST, WILLIAM HENRY (1819-1904)
English organist and composer, born in London and died in Canterbury. He was a chorister at Canterbury Cathedral, later becoming assistant organist, then first organist. He retired in 1898 after seventy years of uninterrupted service in the Cathedral. In 1875 he received the degree of Mus.Doc., and became a music lecturer at St. Augustine’s College, Canterbury. His best known work is an oratorio, David and Absalom.
LÜBECK, JOHANN HEINRICH (1799-1865)
Dutch violinist and composer, born at Alphen and died at The Hague. A Prussian regimental musician from 1813-15, he later studied in Potsdam, and then played in theater orchestras in Riga and Stettin. In 1823 Lübeck settled in the Netherlands, giving violin concerts. From 1827 until his death he was director of the Conservatory of The Hague, and conductor of the “Diligentia” concerts there.

LÜBECK, LOUIS (1838-1904)
Dutch cellist, born in The Hague and died in Berlin. He studied with Jacquard in Paris. For several years he taught cello at the Leipzig Conservatory, and made frequent tours in Europe and the U.S., appearing in concerts with Clara Schumann and Julius Stockhausen. In 1881 he settled in Berlin as a cellist in the court orchestra. He composed 2 Concertos for cello, and solo pieces for his instrument.

LUCANTONI, GIOVANNI (1825-1902)
Italian composer and singing teacher, born in Rieti and died in Paris. Lucantoni studied with Giovanni Pacini in Lucca and Nicola Vaccaj in Milan. In 1857 he settled in Paris as a singing teacher. His vocal compositions were very popular for a time, particularly the duet Una notte a Venezia. He also composed an opera, Elisa, orchestral and piano works.

MACCUNN, HAMISH (1868-1916)
Scottish composer and conductor, born in Greenock and died in London. MacCunn studied at the Royal College of Music (1883-86) with Parry, then taught at the Royal Academy of Music (1888-94). In 1898 he was appointed conductor of the Carl Rosa Opera Company, and later conducted at the Savoy Theatre.

MACFARREN, Sir GEORGE ALEXANDER (1813-1887)
Eminent English composer and pedagogue, born in London. MacFarren studied at the Royal Academy of Music. After graduation, he joined its faculty as a tutor in 1834. Forty years later he was appointed professor of music at Cambridge University, as successor to Sterndale Bennett. He received a knighthood in 1883. Macfarren tried, without success, to create an English national operatic style. His nine Symphonies enjoyed some success in his lifetime, but have not retained their popularity.

MACKENZIE, Sir ALEXANDER CAMPBELL (1847-1935)
Distinguished British composer and educator, born in Edinburgh and died in London. As a child he was sent to Germany, where he studied violin with K. W. Ulrich and theory with Eduard Stein, at the Sondershausen Conservatory (1857-62). After returning to England he studied at the Royal Academy of Music in London. In 1888 he was elected principal of that institution, a post which he held until 1924. His reputation as an educator and composer was very high among musicians, and he was knighted in 1895. As a composer, MacKenzie was a firm believer in programmatic music, and he introduced national Scottish elements in many of his works. Paderewski gave the first performance of his Scottish Concerto for Piano and Orch. (1897).
MANNS, FERDINAND (1844-?)
German violinist. His publications include two Serenades for string quartet, a String Trio for two violins and viola, and a Sonata for violin and piano.

MANSFIELD, ORLANDO AUGUSTINE (1863-1936)
English organist and composer. Born in Warminster and died in Cheltenham. He studied with E. H. Turpin in London and later at Trinity University in Toronto. Mansfield held various positions as organist in England. His publications include about six hundred works for piano and organ, and some one hundred arrangements of choral and other works. His original compositions were published under the pen names Oscar Liemann and Sofie N. Adlam. He also contributed numerous articles to English and American journals.

MARSCHNER, HEINRICH AUGUST (1795-1861)
German composer. Marschner was the most important composer of German opera in the generation between Weber and Wagner, and as such one of the central figures of the Romantic era. He won fame with his opera Der Vampyr (1827), and Der Templer und die Jüdin (1829). His reputation was maintained by his songs, choruses, chamber works and ensuing operas up to Kaiser Adolph von Nassau. He advocated a German operatic style free of foreign influence. From 1840 the rise of Meyerbeer and Wagner began to undermine his achievement. He was held in high esteem by Mendelssohn and Schumann, and later by Bülow, Hanslick, Spitta and Pfitzner.

MARSICK, MARTIN PIERRE JOSEPH (1848-1924)
Distinguished violinist, born in Jupille, near Liège and died in Paris. Marsick studied at the Liège Conservatory and played the organ at the Cathedral there. He then studied violin with Léonard in Brussels, and with Massert at the Paris Conservatoire, where he took the Premier Prix. In 1870 he became a pupil of Joachim in Berlin. Marsick made long solo concert tours in Europe and the U.S., and in 1892 was appointed professor of violin at the Paris Conservatoire. Among his pupils were Carl Flesch and Jacques Thibaud. He wrote three Violin Concertos and numerous solo pieces for the violin.

MASCAGNI, PIETRO (1863-1945)
Pietro Mascagni was one of the most important composers of Italian opera in the generation after Verdi's. His one-act Cavalleria Rusticana (1889), is a landmark in Verismo, a school of Italian naturalism. It was his first opera, written for a competition sponsored by the publishing house of Sonzogno. It both won the prize and became a worldwide success. Mascagni wrote a further seventeen operas and operettas, but none were to equal the dramatic power of his earliest work. In 1929 he became the musical director of La Scala, succeeding Arturo Toscanini. Mascagni was an active supporter of fascism, and at its defeat in 1945 his fortunes changed, and he died in poverty and isolation.
MASSENET, JULES ÉMILE FRÉDÉRIC (1842-1912)
Esteemed French composer, born in Montaub and died in Paris. At the age of nine he was admitted to the Paris Conservatoire, where he studied with Laurent (piano), Reber (harmony), Savard and Ambroise Thomas (composition). In 1878 he was appointed professor of composition at the Conservatoire, and at the same time was elected a member of the Académie des Beaux-Arts. As a pedagogue, Massenet exercised a profound influence on French opera. Among his students were Alfred Bruneau, Gabriel Pierné, and Gustave Charpentier. His best operas, Manon, Werther, and Thaïs, still enjoy tremendous popularity.

MATHISON-HANSEN, JOHAN GOTTFRED (1832-1909)
Danish organist and composer, born in Roskilde and died in Copenhagen. He took lessons in piano and theory with W. H. Barth, then enrolled at the University of Copenhagen as a law student. Although mainly self-taught, he held several positions as church organist in Copenhagen, and made tours in Denmark and Germany. From the mid-1860s he taught piano and organ at the Copenhagen Conservatory. Mathison-Hansen composed a number of works for organ solo.

MÉHUL, ÉTIENNE NICOLAS (1763-1817)
Famous French composer, born in Givet, Ardennes and died in Paris. Méhul studied with the German organist Wilhelm Hansen, before going to Paris in 1778 to continue his musical studies with the composer Jean-Frédéric Edelmann. Several of his operas were performed in Paris in the 1790s, and in 1793 Méhul became a member of the Institut National de Musique, which had been organized under the revolutionary régime. He composed a number of patriotic works during these turbulent years, including the popular Chant du départ (first performed July 4, 1794). He also continued to compose for the theater, selecting subjects for his operas allegorically suited to the times. He became a member of the Légion d’Honneur in 1804. Between 1795 and 1807 Méhul composed eighteen operas, some of which were written in collaboration with other composers. His greatest work from this period is Joseph (Opéra-Comique, Feb. 17, 1807), with which he achieved success throughout Europe and America. Apart from operas, he composed several symphonies and, in spite of poor health, taught classes at the Paris Conservatoire. Among his students was the opera composer Hérold. Although Méhul’s operas have practically disappeared from the active repertoire, his contribution to the operatic art remains of considerable historical importance.

MENDELSSOHN BARTHOLDY, JAKOB LUDWIG FELIX (1809-1847)
German composer, and one of the central figures of the nineteenth-century. The most precocious musical wunderkind of all time, he wrote some of his finest music while still a boy. His grandfather was Moses Mendelssohn, philosopher of the Enlightenment, and Felix grew up surrounded by influences from the Romantic movement. However, the works of Bach, Handel and Mozart, rather than those of his contemporaries, remained his musical ideals. Mendelssohn’s relationship with Goethe was of fundamental importance in his work relating to the Classical period of German literature. Mendelssohn founded the Leipzig Conservatory in the early 1840s and is credited with the revival of interest in the music of J. S. Bach in the nineteenth century.
MERCADANTE, SAVERIO (1795-1870)
Important Italian opera composer and teacher, born at Altamura, near Bari, and died at Naples. He was born out of wedlock and taken to Naples when he was about eleven. In 1808 he entered the Collegio di San Sebastiano, where he studied solfeggio, violin, and flute, and took classes in figured bass and harmony with Furo, and counterpoint with Tritto. He subsequently studied composition with the Collegio's director, Zingarelli. In 1818 he composed three ballets, and it was the success of the third of these, Il flauto incantato, that encouraged him to compose an opera. His first attempt, L'apoteosi d'Ercole, had a successful premiere at Naples in January, 1819. He wrote five more operas before Elisa e Claudio, produced at La Scala, Milan in October 1821, established his reputation. Mercadante composed about sixty operas for different European opera houses. Il giuramento (Milan, March 1837) is considered his masterpiece. From 1833 to 1840 he was maestro di cappella at the Cathedral of Novara, but lost the sight in one eye, and eventually became totally blind. In 1840 he was appointed director of the Naples Conservatory, in succession to his teacher Zingarelli.

MERK, JOSEPH (1795-1852)
Austrian cellist, born in Vienna and died at Ober-Döbling. He was originally to have been a violinist, but after being bitten by a dog (!) he took up the cello. Merk studied in Vienna, and in 1818 became first cellist at the Vienna Opera. Three years later he entered the Imperial Kapelle, and was offered the position of Professor of Cello at the Vienna Conservatory. He wrote two Cello Concertos, and many cello pieces. His études are still of value to students.

MERKEL, GUSTAV ADOLF (1827-1885)
German organist and composer, born in Oberoderwitz and died in Dresden. Merkel studied organ with J. Schneider and theory with J. Otto. He was organist in several churches in Dresden. Most of his compositions are for organ, but he also wrote motets and songs.

MEYERBEER, GIACOMO (1791-1864)
Famous German opera composer, born in Vogelsdorf, near Berlin and died in Paris. His real name was Jakob Liebmann Beer. He studied piano with Lauska and Clementi, and began his studies in music theory with Zelter, continuing later with Anselm Weber, and Abbé Vogler at Darmstadt, where Carl Maria von Weber was one of his fellow pupils. Early in his career Meyerbeer received advice from Salieri to relieve the Germanic heaviness of his compositional style with Italian lyricism. This advice was to prove fundamental to Meyerbeer's future development. After a series of operas which were produced with varying degrees of success, Meyerbeer wrote Il Crociato in Egitto, in which he displayed his great talent for dramatic action and melodic invention. In 1827 he began his long and fruitful association with the famous French writer and librettist Eugène Scribe, with whom he wrote his opera to the French text Robert le Diable, produced at the Paris Opéra in 1831 with extraordinary success. He received the order of Chevalier of the Légion d'Honneur, and in 1834 was elected a member of the French Institut. From then on Meyerbeer took permanent residence in Paris. In 1832 he began work on his greatest opera, Les Huguenots, to a libretto mainly by Scribe; it was staged with enormous success at the Paris Opéra in 1836, and eventually entered the repertoire of all major European opera houses. By 1837, after collaborating with Scribe on two new operas, Le Prophète, and L'Africaine, Meyerbeer had established his importance as an opera composer of great influence. It is said that Rossini, disgusted by the Meyerbeer cult in Paris, decided not to write anymore for the Paris Opéra. After the production of Les Huguenots in Berlin in 1842, Meyerbeer was asked by King Friedrich Wilhelm IV to accept the position of Generalmusikdirektor in the German capital. A curious chapter in Meyerbeer's life was his association with Wagner, whom Meyerbeer, many years his senior, helped financially. Meyerbeer also conducted Wagner's opera Rienzi in Berlin. Wagner repaid him with ingratitude, attacking his operas as a harmful artistic influence and denigrating him as a Jew. Meyerbeer died on May 2, 1864. His body was taken to Berlin, and his funeral was attended by the Prussian court and prominent dignitaries in the arts.

MEYER-OLBERSLEBEN, MAX (1850-1927)

German pianist and composer, born in Olbersleben, near Weimar and died in Würzburg. He first studied with his father, then with Liszt at Weimar. On Liszt's recommendation, he received an allowance from the government for further study, and took lessons in Munich with Cornelius and Rheinberger. In 1876 he became a teacher of piano and theory at Wüllner-Hartung's school in Weimar. One year later he joined the staff of the Würzburg Conservatory, of which he became director in 1907. Meyer-Olbersleben was a composer of talent and ability. His chamber music in particular is effectively written. He also published Lieder, piano pieces and operas.

MOFFAT, ALFRED EDWARD (1863-1950)

Scottish music editor and arranger, born in Edinburgh and died in London. He studied with L. Bussier in Berlin (1882-1888), then went to London, where he became active as an editor of violin music by old English composers. He published the series of Old English Violin Music (London), and Meisterschule der Alten Zeit (Berlin). He also published numerous arrangements, and various other editions of string and vocal music.

MOLIQUE, WILHELM BERNHARD (1802-1869)

German violinist and composer, born at Nuremberg and died at Cannstadt, near Stuttgart. Early studies were with his father, but he was sent to Munich in 1816 by King Maximilian I, who had heard of his extraordinary talent, to study with Rovelli. In 1820 he succeeded Rovelli as concertmaster of the Munich Court Orchestra. He later became Musikdirektor of the Stuttgart orchestra. Moliqur toured extensively in the Netherlands, Russia, England, and France, becoming a renowned performer. After the political crisis of 1849, he settled in London, where he remained until 1866, at which time he returned to Germany. His works include a Concerto for violin, a Concerto for cello, eight String Quartets, pieces for violin and piano, and solo violin.
MONIUSZKO, STANISLAW (1819-1872)
Famous Polish composer, born at Ubiel, province of Minsk, Russia, and died in Warsaw. He studied with August Freyer in Warsaw, and with Rungehagen in Berlin. Moniuszko was employed as a church organist in Vilna from 1840-58, and it was there that he produced a number of his operas. In 1858 he settled in Warsaw, where he was appointed professor at the Conservatory. He wrote about twenty operas and operettas. His masterpiece was Halka, the first genuinely Polish opera, which achieved lasting success in Poland, Russia, and Germany.

MOSCHELES, IGNAZ (1794-1870)
German, pianist, conductor and composer of Czech birth. He received a firm grounding in the works of Bach, Mozart and Clementi, and studied voraciously the music of Beethoven. He was a virtuoso pianist, one of the most popular in Vienna. In 1814 he was commissioned by the publisher Artaria to prepare a piano reduction of Beethoven’s Fidelio. He settled in London in 1825, taught piano at the Royal Academy of Music and became a conductor to the Philharmonic Society. He met Mendelssohn when the latter was fifteen, giving him some piano lessons and forming the basis of a lifelong friendship. Moscheles became professor of piano at the Leipzig Conservatory in 1846, and remained there the rest of his life. Schumann considered Moscheles one of the best sonata composers of his generation, and Henselick assessed him as one of the last great representatives of the classical school, as well as the initiator of a new epoch. Most of Moscheles’ compositions were for piano, and include eight Concertos.

MOSZKOWSKI, MORITZ (1854-1925)
Famous pianist, teacher, and composer, born in Breslau and died in Paris. Moszkowski studied at the Dresden Conservatory, then at the Stern Conservatory and the Kullak Academy in Berlin, where he later became a teacher. In 1897 he settled in Paris, where he had established a fine reputation as a pianist. As a composer, he is most widely known by his pieces in the Spanish style, particularly the two books of Spanish Dances for Piano Solo or Piano Duo. Also popular were his études, concert waltzes, and other piano works. In larger forms he attempted an opera, Boabdil der Maurenkönig (Berlin, 1892), which contained a ballet number that became popular. He also wrote a piano concerto, a ballet, a symphonic poem, Jeanne d’Arc, and other orchestral works. His works are the finest representatives of the salon style and their melodic and harmonic inventiveness gained them a justly deserved popularity.

MOZART, FRANZ XAVER WOLFGANG (1791-1844)
Austrian composer and pianist, the sixth child and younger surviving son of Wolfgang Amadeus and Constanze Mozart. He studied under Sigismund Neukomm, Andreas Streicher, J. N. Hummel, Antonio Salieri, G. J. Vogler, and Georg Albrechtsberger. The brilliant piano writing in his music reveals in particular the influence of Hummel. In 1807 Salieri stated that he possessed a rare talent, and predicted that his career would equal that of his father.
MOZART, WOLFGANG AMADEUS (1756-1791)
Perhaps the greatest musical genius who ever lived, Mozart excelled in every form in which he composed, although his contemporaries found some of his music difficult to understand. Along with Joseph Haydn, he perfected the forms of Symphony, Opera, String Quartet, and Concerto that marked the Classical period. His music formed the basis for the next generation of composers, most notably Beethoven.

MÜLLER, WILHELM
German cellist. Müller succeeded Jules de Swert as cello teacher at the Royal High School in Berlin, and held this position from 1873-1876.

MUNCK, ERNEST (1840-1915)
Belgian cellist. De Munck made his first public performance at the age of eight, and two years later appeared in London. A student of Servais at the Brussels Conservatory, he went on to enjoy a lengthy concert career. De Munck was the cellist in the Maurin String Quartet, and, in 1872, was appointed solo cellist of the Grand Ducal Chapel in Weimar. While there he became a close friend of Liszt. For a number of years he lived in America, before eventually settling in England. There he became Professor of Cello at the Guildhall School of Music in London, a position he held until his death in 1915.

MÜNTZBERGER, JOSEPH (1769-1844)
Born in Brussels, of German extraction, and died in Paris. At the age of fourteen Müntzberger went to Paris, where in 1790 he accepted a place in the orchestra of the "Théâtre Lyrique et Comique," but after a time gave it up and entered the orchestra of the "Théâtre Feydeau," becoming first cellist after Cardon's resignation. During this time he took part in the concerts of the "Rue de Cléry," which, at the beginning of the nineteenth century, were extremely popular with the Parisians. Müntzberger composed a great many works for cello, including five Concertos, two books of Sonatas, with bass, and a Nouvelle Méthode pour le Violoncelle. The latter work most probably appeared before 1800, as it uses clefs which do not occur in French books of instruction after this date.

NAPRAVNIK, EDUARD FRANCHEVIC (1839-1916)
Celebrated Russian conductor of Czech origin, born in Byst, near Hradec Králové, Bohemia and died in St. Petersburg. He studied music in Prague, and took lessons with J. B. Kittl. In 1861 he was engaged by the Russian nobleman Yussupov to lead his private orchestra in St. Petersburg. Two years later he joined the Imperial Opera, becoming chief conductor in 1869. He held this post for forty-seven years, and became renowned as a fine musician, possessing an exceptional sense of pitch and rhythm, and a firm disciplinarian. In one of his novels, Dostoyevsky uses Napravnik's name as a synonym for a guiding spirit. Napravnik conducted the premiere of Boris Godunov and of many other Russian operas, his interpretations of the Russian repertoire establishing a standard emulated by other Russian conductors. He himself composed several operas in the Russian style. One of them, Dubrovsky (St. Petersburg, 1895), has become part of the active repertoire in Russia. He composed operas, symphonies, chamber music, etc.
NEATE, CHARLES (1784-1877)
English pianist and cellist, born in London and died in Brighton. He studied music with James Windsor and took piano lessons with John Field. His cello studies were under the guidance of W. Sharp, and composition under Joseph Wölfl. Neate started his career as a concert pianist in London, and in 1813 became one of the founders of the London Philharmonic Society, with which he appeared as performer and conductor. In 1815 he went to Vienna, where he established a friendly relationship with Beethoven. Neate composed Piano Sonatas, chamber music, and published An Essay on Fingering (1855).

NERUDA, FRANZ (1843-1915)
Bohemian cellist, born in Brünn and died in Copenhagen. He appeared in concerts at an early age with his father and sister. From 1864-76 he was a member of the Royal Orchestra in Copenhagen, where in 1868 he founded the Society for Chamber Music. Neruda succeeded Gade in 1892 as conductor of a similar organization in Stockholm. He composed five Cello Concertos, orchestral works, chamber music, piano pieces and Lieder.

NEVIN, ETHELBERT WOODBRIDGE (1862-1901)
Popular American composer, born at Edgeworth, Pennsylvania, and died at New Haven, Connecticut. After preliminary musical training in America, he went to Germany, where he studied piano and singing with Franz Böhme. Back in the U. S., he pursued further study in Boston with Benjamin J. Lang (piano), and Stephen A. Emery (harmony). In 1884 Nevin returned to Europe and lived in Berlin, Paris, and Florence, before finally settling in New Haven. He achieved great popularity with his songs and piano pieces, written in a semi-Classical style. His pantomime Lady Floriane's Dream was produced in New York in 1898.

NICODÉ, JEAN LOUIS (1853-1919)
German pianist, conductor and composer, possibly of French descent. Nicodé studied piano with Kullak, harmony with Wüerst and composition with Kiel. He taught in Berlin and established the Nicodé Concerts, but later moved to Dresden. Nicodé was a brilliant pianist, with a reputation both for power and expressiveness, and a conductor of great insight. His most important composition is Das Meer, a kind of symphonic opera in six movements scored for large orchestra and voices, and making some use of leitmotif. His large scale works possess genuine imaginative power, and his cello sonatas are orchestral in grandeur.

NICOLAI, WILLEM FREDERIK GERARD (1829-1896)
Dutch conductor, organist, teacher and composer. Nicolai attended the Leiden music school which opened an organ department specially for him in 1844. He continued his studies at the Leipzig Conservatory with Moscheles, Rietz, and C. F. Becker, and with Johann Schneider in Dresden. From 1871 until his death he was editor of the monthly Caecilia, and he published a series of articles on Wagner which stimulated Dutch interest in the composer. His own music is conventional, and includes Cantatas, Lieder and an Oratorio.
NIEDERMeyer, Louis Abraham (1802-1861)
Swiss composer, born in Lyon and died in Paris. He was a pupil in Vienna of Moscheles (piano) and Förster (composition), and later of Fioravanti in Rome and Zingarelli in Naples. Niedermeyer settled in Paris in 1823 where he brought out four operas, none of which was successful. He then turned to sacred composition, and started the Ecole Niedermeyer, which eventually became a flourishing institution. With d’Ortigue he founded a journal for church music, La Maîtrise, and published Méthode d’accompagnement du plain-chant (1856). Niedermeyer’s masses, motets, and hymns were well received. His romances Le Lac; Le Soir; La Mer; L’Automne; etc. were widely known. In addition he published organ preludes, and piano pieces.

Norblin, Émile (1821-1880)
French cellist and teacher. He was born in Paris, the son of cellist Louis Pierre Martin Norblin, who was also his teacher. Norblin had a successful career as a performer, but chose to devote his energies to teaching.

Norman, Fredrik Vilhelm Ludvig (1831-1885)
Swedish composer and conductor. His first publication (1843) was a book of songs composed at the age of eleven. After his father’s death, which left him impoverished, he continued his musical education at the Leipzig Conservatory under Hauptmann, Moscheles and Rietz. Thanks to Schumann’s interest in him, two of his piano pieces were published in 1851. He married the violinist Wilma Neruda and accompanied her during the 1860s. As a composer Norman adhered to the Leipzig Classical-Romantic tradition. His works also reflect the influence of Berwald, whose cause he supported. He wrote three Symphonies and a variety of chamber works.

Noskowski, Sigismund (Zygmunt Von) (1846-1909)
Significant Polish conductor and composer, born in Warsaw. He studied at the Warsaw Music Institute, then became an instructor in a school for the blind, during which time he devised a music notation for the blind. He subsequently went to Germany, where he studied composition with Kiel in Berlin. After a brief period of professional activities in Western Europe, Noskowski returned to Warsaw and was director of the Music Society there (1881-92). In 1888 he was appointed a professor at the Warsaw Conservatory, and later conducted at the Warsaw Opera and Philharmonic Society. He composed several operas, chamber music, songs, three Symphonies, and several Symphonic Poems, of which Step (1897) became quite popular in Poland. In addition he published two collections of folk melodies and was co-author with M. Zawirski of a book on harmony and counterpoint (Warsaw, 1909).

Oberthür, Karl [Carl] (1819-1895)
German harp player and composer, born in Munich and died in London. He studied with Elise Brauchle and G. V. Röder in Munich. After playing at various theaters in Switzerland and Germany, Oberthür went to London in 1844, where he established himself as a teacher. He composed two operas, several Cantatas, a symphonic legend, Lorelei, for Harp and Orchestra, and many solo works for harp.
OFFENBACH, JACQUES (1819-1880)
The creator of French burlesque opera, born in Cologne and died in Paris. He was the son of a Jewish cantor, whose original surname was Eberst. Offenbach was the town where his father lived. He went to Paris in 1833 and studied cello with Vastin at the Conservatoire. He then joined the orchestra of the Opéra-Comique, and began to compose for his instrument. In 1850 he was engaged as conductor at the Théâtre Français. While in this position he composed Chanson de Fortunio for a production of Alfred de Musset’s play Chandelier (1850). Encouraged by the song’s popularity, Offenbach turned his attention to the composition of operettas, a genre in which he became a consummate master.

ONSLow, GEORGES (1784-1853)
French composer of English descent. His father was a Member of Parliament, who, as a result of a sexual scandal, was compelled to leave England in 1781. He travelled to France, where he married and raised a family. Georges Onslow received an aristocratic upbringing and education, which included the study of music, travel, horsemanship and hunting. His friendship with a group of amateur musicians aroused his interest in chamber music, and encouraged him to study the cello, and to start composing. He began studies in theory and composition with Reicha in Paris in 1808. In 1830 he was elected the second honorary member of the Philharmonic Society of London (Mendelssohn was the first in 1829). His chamber music is the largest and most successful part of his output. In one of his string quintets a recurring, high-pitched note, which he heard constantly after a hunting accident when he was shot in the ear, attempts to portray his affliction.

Osborne, George Alexander (1806-1893)
Irish pianist and composer. Osborne studied theology, with the intention of joining the clergy, but later taught himself to play the piano. He went to Paris in 1826 and studied with J. P. Pixis and Féris. Later he studied piano with Friedrich Kalkbrenner, becoming one of the finest exponents of Kalkbrenner’s style of playing in France. He became a fashionable pianist and a well-known teacher in Paris and London. Chopin, de Bériot and Berlioz were included among his friends. Osborne’s music was popular in his day, and Berlioz described his songs and trios as being well designed and stylish.

Ould, Charles
Born at Romford, in Essex, he came as a child to London. Until the age of sixteen he studied flute and singing, but eventually preferred the cello. Ould received his first instruction from a member of the orchestra of the Italian Opera in London. A few years later the Belgian cellist, Guillaume Paque, became his teacher. Ould was first cellist at the Richter Concerts, as well as Musician to Her Majesty.
PAGANINI, NICCOLO (1782-1840)
Niccolo Paganini, born in Genoa, was an Italian violinist and composer considered by many to have been the greatest violinist of the nineteenth century. Paganini’s performances had an electrifying effect upon his listeners, inspiring Liszt and Schumann to expand the possible limits of pianistic virtuosity. Virtually all of Paganini’s works were composed for the violin, with the intention of displaying his extraordinary technique. The music was so difficult, it was commonly thought that so astonishing an ability could only be obtained by entering into a pact with the Devil. A phenomenal egoist, he refused to perform the solo viola part in Berlioz’s Harold in Italy due to its lack of overt virtuosity. His compositions include concertos, capriccios, and chamber music, much of it never published.

PAPINI, GUIDO (1847-1912)
Italian violinist and composer, born in Florence and died in London. He studied under Giorgetti and was appointed court violinist to the Queen of Italy. Papini later concertized extensively, appearing in Paris, Lisbon and London, achieving success everywhere by performing equally well music from the Baroque and modern eras. After moving to England, he taught violin at the Royal Academies of Music in Dublin and London. His compositions include two Concertos for violin, many smaller pieces and a Violin School.

PAQUE, GUILLAUME (1825-1876)
Belgian cellist. Born in Brussels and died in London, he studied at the Brussels Conservatoire, and then entered the orchestra of the Royal Theatre there. Paque later joined the orchestra of the Italian Opera at Barcelona as solo cellist, where he also became professor at the Music School. In 1849 he played before the Queen of Spain in Madrid. In the following year Paque moved to London, where he quickly gained a fine reputation for his orchestral and chamber music playing. He took up a position as solo cellist at the Royal Italian Opera, and taught at the Royal Academy of Music in London. Amongst his compositions he published several Fantasias, Variations and Drawing-room pieces for his instrument.

PARRY, Sir CHARLES HUBERT HASTINGS (1848-1918)
English composer, scholar and teacher, who revitalised English musical life at a time when standards of composition, performance, criticism and education were low. Parry achieved recognition when his Piano Concerto in F sharp was played by Dannreuther at the Crystal Palace in London, and his cantata Scenes from Prometheus Unbound was performed at the Gloucester Festival. In 1893 Parry published The Art of Music, in which he applied to musical history the Darwinian concept of evolution. He was responsible for the third volume of the Oxford History of Music, The Music of the Seventeenth Century (1902), and in 1909 he published a critical biography of Johann Sebastian Bach.
PAUER, ERNST (1826-1905)
Austrian pianist, born in Vienna and died in Jugenheim, near Darmstadt. Pauer studied piano with Mozart’s son Franz Xaver Mozart, and composition with Sechter. In 1851 he went to London, where he taught at the Royal Academy of Music. Ten years later he began a series of historical performances of harpsichord and piano music performed in chronological order. After appearing in Germany and Austria he was appointed pianist to the Austrian court, where he remained until 1896. He published in English a number of educational works of some value, among them The Elements of the Beautiful in Music (1877), and A Dictionary of Pianists and Composers for the Pianoforte (1895). He also published collections for piano students: The New Gradus ad Parnassum, and Cultures of the Left Hand. In addition he made excellent arrangements of symphonies by Beethoven and Schumann, and arranged Mendelssohn’s orchestral works for piano four-hands and eight-hands. These arrangements were widely used in the nineteenth-century by young pianists.

PEARSON (PIERSON), HENRY HUGH (1815-1873)
English-born German composer. He was born in Oxford, and, although destined for a career in medicine, began to study music against his father’s wishes. Pearson entered Trinity College, Cambridge in 1836, and three years later went to Germany where he studied with Rinck and Reissiger, and with Tomasek in Prague. In June 1844 he was appointed to the Reid Professorship of Music at Edinburgh University, but resigned eight months later and returned to Germany. It was there that he felt most at ease with the prevailing zeitgeist. Pearson enjoyed a respectable career as composer in Germany but never managed to gain acceptance in the land of his birth, where critics found his works difficult to understand and too unpredictable. His compositions include many sets of Lieder, choral compositions, operas, and orchestral overtures. He died in Leipzig.

PESSARD, EMILE LOUIS FORTUNÉ (1843-1917)
French composer, born in Paris. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire with Bazin (harmony), Laurent (piano), Benoist (organ), and Carafa (composition), winning the first harmony prize in 1862, and the Grand Prix de Rome in 1866 with the cantata Delila. In 1881 he was appointed professor of harmony at the Paris Conservatoire. Pessard enjoyed considerable respect as a composer of songs. As a student, Debussy copied Pessard’s song Chanson d’un fou, and the manuscript in Debussy’s handwriting was published erroneously as Debussy’s own.

PFIEFFER, GEORGES JEAN (1835-1908)
French composer, born at Versailles and died in Paris. He began his career as a pianist, and later became a music critic in Paris. He worked for the Paris firm Pleyel, Wolff et Cie., piano makers. His compositions include operas and operettas, a Fantasy for Piano and Orchestra, many chamber works, and piano music.
PFITZNER, HANS (1869-1949)
Hans Erich Pfitzner, a Russian-born German composer, attempted to preserve the traditions of nineteenth century romanticism. He became prominent as a conductor, pianist, teacher, and critic of twentieth century musical innovations. Pfitzner achieved immediate recognition in the 1890s with the first public performance of his works. His most important composition is the musical legend Palestrina, written between 1912 and 1915 to his own libretto. This is a Wagnerian-styled music drama portraying the sixteenth century composer as the savior of church music at the Council of Trent. His output includes major contributions to virtually all musical genres, as well as extensive work as a poet and essayist. Following World War II, Pfitzner was accused of propagandizing for the Nazi government, but was exonerated after a trial. Pfitzner was involved in a famous literary dispute with Ferrucio Busoni over musical trends and philosophical tendencies.

PIATTI, ALFREDO CARLO (1822-1901)
Italian cellist and composer, born in Borgo Canale, near Bergamo and died in Crocetto di Mozzo. He received primary musical education from his father, the violinist Antonio Piatti, then studied cello at the Milan Conservatory. He began his concert career in 1838, and in 1843 played with Liszt in Munich. Piatti achieved great success in England, where he gave annual concerts. For almost forty years (1859-1898) he was a regular performer in the Saturday Popular Concerts of chamber music in London. He combined excellent technical skill with profound musicianship, establishing a reputation as a cellist on a level comparable with that of Joachim among violinists. He composed two Cello Concertos, six Sonatas, and a number of solo pieces for cello. He also edited string sonatas by Locatelli and Boccherini, and brought out editions of cello methods by Kummer and others. Sterndale Bennett composed his Sonata Duo for Piatti.

PIERNÉ, HENRI CONSTANT GABRIEL (1863-1937)
French composer, conductor, and organist, born in Metz and died in Ploujean, near Morlaix. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire (1871-82), where his teachers were Marmontel (piano), César Franck (organ), and Massenet (composition). He won the first prizes for piano (1879), counterpoint and fugue (1881), and organ (1882), and was awarded the Grand Prix de Rome (1882) with the cantata Edith. He succeeded César Franck as organist at Ste.-Clotilde (1890), where he remained until 1898. In 1903 he was appointed assistant conductor to Colonne, and later became his successor. He was elected in 1925 to the Académie des Beaux-Arts. Pierné was a prolific composer, composing for virtually every musical medium, but of his many works only the oratorio La Croisade des Enfants, and the piano piece Marche des petits soldats de plomb, became popular.
PINSUTI, CIRO ERCOLE (1829-1888)
Celebrated Italian singing teacher and composer, born at Sinalunga, and died in Florence. At the age of eleven he was elected an honorary member of the Accademia Filarmonica of Rome. He was taken to England soon after by Henry Drummond, where he studied piano under Cipriani Potter, and violin under Blagrove. Pinsuti spent the following years in both England and Italy. In Italy he studied privately with Rossini, and taught piano in Bologna, while in 1856 he was appointed professor of singing at the Royal Academy of Music in London. He produced several operas, and wrote some two hundred songs to English and Italian texts.

PIOT, JULIEN (1850-1923)
Belgian violonist and teacher, born at Louvain and died in Paris. Piot was a celebrated virtuoso and world-famous teacher. He was also the author of a highly regarded violin method.

PITT, PERCY (1870-1932)
English conductor and composer, born in London. Pitt spent a number of years in Germany, studying with Jadassohn and Reinecke at the Leipzig Conservatory, and with Rheinberger at the Akademie der Tonkunst in Munich. Returning to England in 1893, he devoted his energies to conducting, holding positions at the Beecham Opera Company (1915-18), and the British National Opera Company (1920-24). From 1922-30 he was music director of the British Broadcasting Corporation. Pitt wrote instrumental music, and his Ballade for Violin and Orchestra (1900) was performed by Ysaÿe.

PIXIS, JOHANN PETER (1788-1874)
German pianist and composer, younger son of Friedrich Wilhelm Pixis, who became famous as a pianist at a very early age. He also played the violin, and accompanied his brother on the cello. The family moved to Vienna in 1806 where Pixis studied with Albrechtsberger, and came into contact with Beethoven, Meyerbeer and Schubert. Later he moved to Paris and became a successful pianist virtuoso and teacher. The majority of his compositions are for piano, although he also wrote chamber music, operas and a symphony. Along with Liszt, Thalberg, Henri Herz, Czerny and Chopin, he contributed one variation to the Hexameron, a set of variations on a theme from Bellini’s opera I Puritani.

PIZZI, EMILIO (1861-1940)
Italian composer, born at Verona and died in Milan. He studied at the Instituto Musicale at Bergamo, and at the Conservatory of Milan with Ponchielli and Bazzini. In 1885 Pizzi was awarded first prize for his opera Lina. Two years later he was appointed director of the Instituto Musicale at Bergamo. Pizzi is known to have lived for some time in London after the year 1900. He composed operas, a Messa solenne, a Requiem, violin pieces, piano pieces and songs.
PLANCHET, DOMINIQUE CHARLES (1857-1946)
French composer and pedagogue, born in Toulouse and died at Versailles. He studied at the Ecole Niedermeyer in Paris, then was for many years organist at the Cathedral in Versailles. In 1898 Planchet was appointed organist at the Ste.-Trinité in Paris, and taught at the Ecole Niedermeyer. He was active as general secretary of the Société des Compositeurs. In 1905 he won the Prix Chartier for chamber music. Planchet composed an opera, two Cello Concertos, much sacred music, organ pieces, songs and chamber music.

PLEYEL, CAMILLE (1788-1855)
Austro-French composer, pianist and business associate of his father Ignace Pleyel. He studied with his parents and with Desormery, Dussek and Steibelt. In 1815 he became a partner in the firm 'Ignace Pleyel et fils aîné,' but lived in London in order to avoid conscription during Napoleon's brief return to power. After returning to Paris he took over the running of the firm, taking personal responsibility for the piano-building side of its activities. In 1830 the firm opened the Salle Pleyel, where Chopin gave his Paris début in 1832. Pleyel published a number of his own compositions before devoting himself entirely to commercial activities.

POORTEN, ARVED (1835-?)
Born at Riga, he was Kummer's pupil in Dresden, and later attended the Brussels Conservatory. Poorten became a member of the Russian Imperial band, and teacher at the St. Petersburg Conservatory. He published cello music, including six Morceaux caractéristiques.

POPPER, DAVID (1843-1913)
Austrian cellist and composer, son of a Jewish cantor. He studied the cello with Julius Goltermann at the Prague Conservatory. His first public performances were in 1863, and he subsequently toured throughout Europe and Russia, accompanied by his wife, the pianist Sophie Menter. Hans von Bülow was so impressed by his virtuosity that he also accompanied him in concerts and arranged for his appointment as Kammervirtuos to Prince Hohenzollern. Popper became principal cellist of the Vienna Hofoper in 1868, and later joined the Hellmesberger Quartet. He settled in Budapest in 1896, becoming a professor at the Royal Conservatory. He wrote extensively for the cello, including two Concertos, two Suites, and a considerable number of salon pieces. He also wrote a series of studies known as the High School of Violoncello Playing, and a Requiem Op. 66 for three cellos and orchestra, a work which became extremely popular. Popper had a polished technique, a warm tone and a refined style, and was acknowledged as one of the great virtuosos and teachers of his day.

PGPPER, WILHELM (1846-1905)
Cellist, brother of famed David Popper. The son of a Jewish Cantor, he had a distinguished career as an orchestral player in London, New York, and Vienna. From 1880-1905 he was a member of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra. He produced numerous works for cello, which were well regarded by his contemporaries.
POWELL, THOMAS (1776-1833)
Born in London, Powell studied cello, piano and harp. In 1805 he appeared in his home town as solo cellist, in a Concerto which he had composed. From 1810 he established himself in Dublin as a teacher of music. His contemporaries considered him equal to Romberg, although Powell's name was scarcely known out of England. After several years' residence in Dublin, Powell settled in Edinburgh. He was a member of the Royal Society of Musicians. His published compositions include fifteen Violin Concertos, duets for violin and cello, and for two cellos, a Capriccio for cello, and orchestral overtures.

RABAUD, HIPPOLYTE (1839-1900)
Rabaud was Professor of Cello at the Paris Conservatoire.

RADOUX, JEAN THÉODORE (1835-1911)
Belgian composer and pedagogue, born in Liège. He studied bassoon with Daussoigne-Méhul at the Conservatory of Liège, where he became a teacher in 1856. He won the Belgian Prix de Rome with the cantata Le Juif errant (1859), then went to Paris for additional study with Halévy. In 1872 he was appointed director of the Conservatory of Liège.

RAFF, JOSEPH JOACHIM (1822-1882)
German composer and teacher. On the recommendation of Mendelssohn his piano pieces Op. 2-6 were published in Leipzig in 1844. He later worked for Liszt, copying parts, and assisting him in instrumentation. He was appointed director of the Hoch Conservatory in Frankfurt, a post he held until his death. Raff had grandiose notions of himself as a composer with a historical calling, and tried to combine some of the great musical achievements of past and present. During his lifetime he enjoyed great fame within Germany and abroad, and was hailed, along with Wagner and Brahms, as one of the masters of modern music. His enormous reputation and popularity did not long survive his death. Among his vast output are symphonies, concertos, chamber works, sonatas, and many works for solo piano.

REBER, NAPOLÉON HENRI (1807-1880)
French composer, born in Mulhouse, Alsace and died in Paris. He studied with Reicha and Le Sueur at the Paris Conservatoire, where he became professor of harmony in 1851. In 1862 he succeeded Halévy as professor of composition (being succeeded in turn by Saint-Saëns in 1880). Reber's compositions include four comic operas, a ballet, four symphonies, chamber music, piano pieces for two and four hands, and a Traité d'Harmonie (1862).

REBLING, GUSTAV (1821-1902)
German organist, born at Barby and died at Magdeburg. He was a pupil of F. Schneider at Dessau (1836-39), and in 1847 became organist of the French church in Magdeburg. Rebling composed pieces for organ and piano, choruses and songs, two Cello Sonatas, and other chamber music.
REGER, MAX (1873-1916)
German composer, and the most important composer in Germany of organ music since J.S. Bach. Reger grew up under the influence of Wagner and Brahms, but his own highly contrapuntal music has both Baroque and Romantic characteristics. He constantly tried to renew the old traditions, earning for himself the nickname 'the second Bach,' a label which persisted for many years after his death. Reger was a prolific composer in all genres except opera, and his music, with its impression of inner disunity, has had a lasting influence.

REINAGLE, ALEXANDER ROBERT (1799-1877)
English organist, born at Brighton and died at Kidlington, near Oxford. He studied music with his father, Joseph Reinagle, at Oxford. Later he became organist of the church of St. Peter in the East, as well as establishing himself as a teacher in Oxford. Reinagle composed a number of sacred pieces, including the psalm tune St. Peter, and at least one Piano Sonata (London, 1825). In addition he wrote and compiled many teaching manuals for the violin and cello.

REINECKE, CARL HEINRICH CARSTEN (1824-1910)
German composer, teacher, administrator, pianist and conductor. In 1846 he was appointed court pianist in Copenhagen, where he met and accompanied the violinist H. W. Ernst, as well as performing solo recitals. By 1860 his reputation had grown throughout Europe, and he was invited to teach at the Leipzig Conservatory, where he became director in 1879. Reinecke transformed the Conservatory into one of the most renowned in Europe. He was also the conductor of the Gewandhaus Orchestra until 1895. As a composer he was best known for his numerous piano compositions, in practically every known musical form. He was gifted in many fields, and produced fine work also in painting and poetry.

REINHOLD, HUGO (1854-1935)
Austrian composer, born in Vienna. He studied piano with Julius Epstein and composition with Bruckner at the Vienna Conservatory, graduating in 1874. He then was engaged as a piano teacher at the Akademie der Tonkunst in Vienna. He composed a number of attractive piano pieces, a Violin Sonata, and songs.

REISSIGER, KARL GOTTLIED (1798-1859)
German composer, conductor and teacher. In 1821 he went to Vienna where he took theory lessons from Salieri, and one year later moved to Munich to study composition and singing with Winter. The King of Prussia employed him to study the methods of music education in France and Italy, and to advise him on these matters in Berlin. In 1826 he was appointed successor to von Weber as director of the Court Opera in Dresden, and two years later he became Hofkapellmeister, a post he held until his death. Reissiger embodied the dying tradition of the Kapellmeister-composer, mainly producing works for use in Dresden, or writing in the fashionable forms of his day.
RENSBURG, JACQUES (1846-?)
Born at Rotterdam, he studied cello under Giese, Daniel de Lange, and Emil Hegar. In 1867 he went to Cologne in order to study with Schmitt, whom he assisted as teacher at the Rhenish School of Music, receiving the position on Schmitt’s death. Rensburg performed throughout Germany, but was afflicted with a nervous illness which forced him to retire into private life. In 1880 he moved to Bonn, where he became a partner in a commercial business. His compositions include: Recitative, Adagio, and Allegro, in the form of a Concerto.

RHEINBERGER, JOSEPH GABRIEL (1839-1901)
German composer, organist, conductor and teacher. He made astonishing progress at the organ, and was employed as an organist by the age of fourteen. In 1867 he became a professor at the Munich Conservatory, where he remained until his death. He was always much sought-after and highly respected as a teacher. In 1877 he was appointed Hofkapellmeister, thereby exercising considerable influence on the cultivation of sacred music. His music attempts to preserve tradition starting with Bach, and proceeding through the Classical and early Romantic periods.

RICHTER, ERNST FRIEDRICH EDUARD (1808-1879)
German theorist, teacher and composer. In 1831 he went to Leipzig University to study theology, and at the same time received musical instruction from Weinlig, who was then Kantor. He conducted the Leipzig Singakademie and became a professor of harmony and counterpoint at the newly founded Conservatory. Richter’s manuals, especially the Lehrbuch der Harmonie, translated into at least six languages, became standard textbooks for several generations of students in Europe and the United States.

RIES, FERDINAND (1784-1838)
German pianist, composer and copyist, the most celebrated member of the Ries family. He was taught the piano and violin by his father and the cello by Romberg from the age of five. In 1801 he went to Vienna and studied with Beethoven, often assisting him in copying and secretarial work. Beethoven taught him piano, but sent him to Albrechtsberger for composition. After years of constant travel, Ries ended up in London, where he was highly respected as a pianist and composer. He stayed in London for eleven years, and after amassing a small fortune returned to his native Rhineland in 1824 to compose and conduct. Ries’s larger works show a fine level of invention often spoiled by a lax approach to self criticism. He collaborated with F. G. Wegeler in Biographische Notizen über Ludwig van Beethoven, one of the most important early biographical accounts of Beethoven.

RIES, FRANZ (1846-1932)
German publisher, born in Berlin and died at Naumberg. He studied violin with his father and later with Massart at the Paris Conservatory. Ries had a short-lived career as a concert violinist, and in 1875 entered the music publishing business. From 1881 to 1924 he was director of the firm Ries & Erler in Berlin.
RÖDER, MARTIN (1851-1895)
German composer and singing teacher, born in Berlin and died in Boston. He studied music in Berlin, then went to Milan, where he organized the Società del Quartetto Corale (1875), a group performing vocal quartets. He then held various posts as singing teacher in Berlin (1881-87), Dublin (1887-92), and finally at the New England Conservatory in Boston (1892). He wrote three operas, of which only one, Vera, was performed (Hamburg, 1881), two Symphonic Poems, an Overture, and chamber music.

ROMBERG, BERNHARD HEINRICH (1767-1841)
German cellist and composer, son of Bernhard Anton Romberg. He learned the cello from his father, a bassoonist whom he accompanied on concert tours. Along with his cousin, violinist Andreas Romberg, he performed all over Europe with great success while still in his teens. He soon acquired a reputation for the beauty of his tone, and the warmth and expressiveness of his interpretations. Romberg took a teaching post at the Paris Conservatoire in 1801, but moved the next year to Berlin, where he joined the Royal Court Orchestra in 1805. For some time he spent the greater part of his life on tour, performing with his cousin Andreas and Ferdinand Ries. He became Hofkapellmeister in Berlin in 1816, but resigned his post and moved to Hamburg a few years later. Romberg raised the level of cello playing in his day both by his fine performances and his compositions, many of which comprise national airs collected on his travels. He also wrote two Concertos, three Concertinos, a Fantasia with orchestra, and many Duets and Sonatas. He has been dubbed the founder of the German school of violoncello playing.

RÖNTGEN, JULIUS (1855-1932)
Important German-Dutch composer, born in Leipzig and died in Bilthoven, near Utrecht. He studied music with his father, Engelbert Röntgen, and later with Plaidy and Reinecke in Leipzig and Franz Lachner in Munich. From 1877-1925 he taught in Amsterdam. Röntgen was conductor of the Society for the Promotion of Music, and a co-founder (1884) of the Amsterdam Conservatory, which he directed from 1914-1924. He was a friend of Brahms and Grieg, and his publications include a biography of Grieg (1930), and an edition of letters written by Brahms to T. Engelmann (1918). Röntgen wrote an enormous amount of music in every genre, as well as editing old Dutch keyboard compositions and songs by Adrianus Valerius. His correspondence was published by his widow in 1934.

ROSENHAIN, JACOB (1813-1894)
German pianist and composer. He studied with Jakob Schmitt, Kalliwoda and Schnyder von Wartensee. Rosenhain lived in Frankfurt am Main, where his one-act opera Der Besuch im Irrenhause was performed in 1834. Later he moved to Paris, where he promoted chamber music evenings with Alard, Ernst and other eminent players. These events were frequented by Cherubini, Rossini, Berlioz and others. In 1843 he founded a piano school in collaboration with Johann Baptist Cramer. In 1870 Rosenhain settled in Baden-Baden where he again became the centre of a distinguished artistic circle.
ROSSINI, GIOACCHINO ANTONIO (1792-1868)
Gioacchino Rossini was one of the most significant and influential composers of opera in the 19th century. In 1815, he became musical director of the Teatro San Carlo and Teatro del Fondo in Naples. The following year he composed his best-known opera, Il Barbiere di Siviglia (The Barber of Seville). His last stage work, the grand opera Guillaume Tell (William Tell, 1829), became a landmark in the history of romantic opera. Rossini also produced two significant religious works, the Stabat Mater (1842) and the Petite Messe solennelle (Short Solemn Mass, 1864), as well as numerous piano pieces and songs grouped under the title Peches de vieillesse (Sins of Old Age).

ROUSSEAU, SAMUEL ALEXANDRE (1853-1904)
French composer, born in Neuve-Maison, Aisne, and died in Paris. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire with César Franck (organ) and Bazin (composition), winning the Grand Prix de Rome with the cantata Le Fille de Jephté (1878), and the Prix Cressent with the one-act comic opera Dianora (Opéra-Comique, Dec. 22, 1879). In 1892 he was appointed conductor at the Théâtre-Lyrique, and was for ten years chorus master at the Société des Concerts du Conservatoire. His operas and music dramas were performed with considerable success.

ROUSSELOT, SCIPION
Born at the beginning of the nineteenth century. During his attendance at the Paris Conservatoire, he received instruction in composition from Reicha and Baudiot. Rousselot went later to England. Besides several chamber music compositions and a Symphony, he wrote piano works and a Morceau de Salon for violoncello.

RUBINSTEIN, ANTON GRIGOR’EVICH (1829-1894)
Russian pianist, composer and teacher. Rubinstein was one of the greatest pianists of the nineteenth century, his playing often favorably compared with Liszt’s. He was also an influential, although at times controversial, figure in Russian musical circles, and an exceptionally prolific composer. Mendelssohn and Meyerbeer were the composers who influenced him most, but some of his works also contain a nationalistic flavor. Rubinstein was an exceptionally imaginative composer whose works were often flawed by an insufficient working out of the material. The standard of piano playing in Russia greatly improved as a result of Rubinstein’s work, as did the general social status of musicians.

RÜFER, PHILIPPE BARthéLEMÉ (1844-1919)
German pianist and composer, born in Liège (of German parents) and died in Berlin. He studied at the Conservatory of Liège, then settled in Berlin, where he taught piano at the Stern Conservatory, Kullak’s Akademie der Tonkunst, and (from 1881) the Scharwenka Conservatory. He composed the operas Merlin, and Ingo, a Symphony, Overtures, piano music and Lieder.
SAINT-GEORGE, GEORGE (1841-1921)
Notable player on the viola d’amore, born in Leipzig, of English parents, and died in London. He studied piano, violin, and theory in Dresden and Prague. His violin teacher, Moritz Mildner of Prague, had a fine viola d’amore, which he lent to Saint-George for practicing. He became a specialist in the instrument, and formed a duo with his son, Henry Saint-George, who played the viola da gamba. About 1862 he settled in London and became a manufacturer of string instruments.

SAINTON, PROSPER (1813-1890)
Violinist, born in Toulouse and died in London. Sainton was a pupil of Habeneck at the Paris Conservatoire, winning first prize for violin in 1834. From 1840-44 he was a professor at the Conservatory of Toulouse. He then went to England and was appointed professor at the Royal Academy of Music. He became concertmaster of the London Philharmonic (1846-54), at Covent Garden (1847-71), and at Her Majesty’s Theatre (1871-80). Sainton composed two Violin Concertos and several violin solos.

SAINT-SAËNS, CHARLES CAMILLE (1825-1921)
French composer, pianist, organist and writer. He was a talented and prolific composer, as well as a virtuoso pianist and writer of books, articles and letters. Saint-Saëns composed in virtually every genre, and was the first established composer to write music for a film, L’assassinat du Duc de Guise in 1908. He had considerable influence over generations of musicians, both through his intellect and his interpretations. His music, which was more successful in the concert hall than in the theater, embodies the essential French qualities of clarity and order.

SARASATE, PABLO DE (1844-1908)
Celebrated Spanish violin virtuoso, born at Pamplona and died in Biarritz. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire under Alard, taking first prize in the violin class of 1857. His playing was noted for its extraordinary beauty of tone, perfection of technique, and grace of manner, but his repertoire consisted almost exclusively of fantasies on operatic airs, mostly arranged by himself. (Later he turned to the masterpieces of violin literature.) Sarasate made extended tours worldwide, and was rewarded by gifts from his many admirers. These were placed in a special museum in his native city. For him Saint-Saëns wrote his Rondo capriccioso; Lalo, his Symphonie Espagnole; Bruch, the Schottische Fantasie; Mackenzie, the Pibroch suite.

SCHARWENKA, FRANZ XAVER (1850-1924)
Polish-German pianist, composer, teacher and educator. He was one of the leading pianists of his generation, renowned for his singing tone and his interpretations of Chopin’s music. In 1881 he founded his own Conservatory in Berlin, opening a New York branch in 1891. Seven years later he returned to Berlin, but continued to tour the USA and Canada. In Germany he took part in founding the Music Teachers’ Federation (1900), and the Federation of German Performing Artists (1912). His compositions are generally melodic and graceful.
SCHARWENKA, LUDWIG PHILIPP (1847-1917)
Polish-German composer and pedagogue, born at Samter, Posen, and died at Bad Nauheim. He studied with Wüerst and Dorn at the Kullak Academy of Music in Berlin, and in 1868 was appointed teacher of composition there. With his brother Franz Xaver he founded in 1881 the Scharwenka Conservatory in Berlin, which was amalgamated two years later with the Klindworth Conservatory. The resulting Klindworth-Scharwenka Conservatory acquired a fine reputation for its teaching standards. Scharwenka was an excellent composer in a Romantic vein, whose music was greatly influenced by Schumann. His Arkaische Suite for Orchestra, the symphonic poem Frühlingswogen, and the orchestral Dramatische Fantasie were performed many times in his lifetime. He also wrote a Symphony, a Violin Concerto, much chamber music, and piano pieces.

SCHLÖSSER, KARL WILHELM ADOLPH (1830-1913)
German pianist, born at Darmstadt and died at Great Bookham, England. Schlösser made his début at Frankfurt in 1847. After concert tours in Germany, France, and England, he settled in London in 1854. While in London he was given a position as teacher at the Royal Academy of Music, where he remained for close to fifty years, retiring in 1903. Schlösser composed a substantial amount of music. His works comprise a Piano Quartet, Piano Trio, twenty-four studies and many other pieces for piano.

SCHMITT, ALOYS (1788-1866)
German pianist and composer, born in Erlenbach and died in Frankfurt. Schmitt studied composition with André at Offenbach, and in 1816 went to Frankfurt, where he lived for the remainder of his life. He composed four operas, two Oratorios and church music, but it is for his numerous piano compositions that he is best known.

SCHRÖDER, CARL [KARL] (1848-1935)
German cellist and composer, born at Quedlinburg and died in Bremen. Schröder studied with Drechsler and Kiel. In 1871 he formed a string quartet with his brothers, Hermann, Franz and Alwin. Schröder was solo cellist in the Gewandhaus Orchestra in Leipzig (1874-81), and subsequently held eight successive posts as conductor in Germany and the Netherlands. He finally settled in Berlin as cello teacher at the Stern Conservatory (1911-24). Among his works are two operas, two String Quadrats, and other chamber music. He compiled three pedagogical manuals: Katechismus des Dirigierens und Taktierens (1889); Katechismus des Violinspiels (1889); Katechismus des Violoncellspiels (1890), which were also published in English. His collections of classical works for the cello, especially Vortrag-studien (sixty pieces), are of value.
SCHUBERT, FRANZ PETER (1797-1828)
Born near Vienna, Schubert was one of the greatest composers of the nineteenth century. Widely regarded as the world's finest songwriter, Schubert wrote nearly two hundred songs, three masses, three symphonies, and much piano and chamber music before his nineteenth birthday. He was an immensely prolific composer, writing for every musical medium. Although ostensibly composed in the classical style, his music departed in novel ways from the models of Mozart and Haydn. His expressive gifts are most clearly demonstrated in his six hundred and thirty-four lieder, in which an equal partnership between piano and voice is established. They portray the inner meaning of the text in a way that subsequent composers sought to emulate. Schubert's influence was felt throughout the century: his large instrumental and choral works of 1828 were Bruckner's point of departure, while his chamber music and piano compositions influenced Schumann, Brahms and Dvorak.

SCHULHOFF, JULIUS (1825-1898)
Noted pianist and composer, born in Prague and died in Berlin. Schulhoff studied in Prague, then went to Paris, where he gave concerts under Chopin's patronage. It was to Chopin that he dedicated his first composition, an Allegro Brillant. After a lengthy European tour, he returned to Paris and established himself as a highly-respected teacher. Upon the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian War in 1870 he settled in Dresden, moving to Berlin shortly before his death. Schulhoff published much salon music for piano, his Galop de bravura and Impromptu Polka in particular becoming great favorites.

SCHUMANN, ROBERT ALEXANDER (1810-1856)
Robert Schumann, born at Zwickau, was one of the major German romantic composers. He possessed a love of literature equal to his love of music, and this was reflected in his sensitivity to the relationship between text and music in his lieder. He was also an outstanding critic who founded and wrote for the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik. The range, variety, and number of Schumann's compositions are remarkable, and as a respected and influential critic he helped launch the careers of other composers, most notably Chopin and Brahms. Schumann's writings are an invaluable primary source of information about nineteenth century music and musicians.

SCHWENCKE, KARL (CARL) (1797-1870)
German pianist and composer. Schwenccke was born in Hamburg, but travelled widely throughout his adult life. In 1824 he met Beethoven, who composed the canon Schwenke dich (WoO 187) for him. He wrote a symphony that was successfully received in Paris and Hamburg, and was later published in an arrangement for piano. Schwenccke's compositions include a Mass, a Violin Sonata, three Sonatas for piano duet, and solo piano pieces. He died near Vienna.
SCHYTTE, LUDVIG THEODOR (1848-1909)
Danish composer, born at Aarhus and died in Berlin. As a young man he was a pharmacist, then began to study piano with Anton Réé and composition with Gade, finishing under Taubert in Berlin and Liszt in Weimar. He settled in Vienna in 1887 as a teacher, but moved to Berlin in 1907 where he taught at the Stern Conservatory. A master of miniature forms, he wrote a number of attractive piano pieces, some of which became extremely popular. He also composed a one-act opera, an operetta, a Piano Concerto, chamber music and a song cycle.

SEISS, ISIDOR WILHELM (1840-1905)
German composer and teacher, born in Dresden and died in Cologne. Seiss studied piano with Friedrich Wieck and music theory with J. Otto. In 1870 he was appointed to the faculty of the Conservatory in Cologne, where he conducted the concerts of the Musikalische Gesellschaft (1873-1900). Among his students was Willem Mengelberg. Seiss composed an opera, and published a number of useful piano studies in the bravura style.

SERVAIS, ADRIEN FRANÇOIS (1807-1866)
Belgian cellist and composer. Servais first played the violin, but after hearing a concert of N. J. Platé, he decided to study the cello. He entered the Brussels Conservatory, winning the Premier Prix almost immediately. Subsequently he made several tours through Europe and Russia, during which he often performed his own compositions, and was received with great enthusiasm. In 1848 he succeeded Platé at the Conservatory, and was nominated solo cellist to the King of Belgium. Servais, described by Berlioz as ‘Paganinian’, was probably the finest cello virtuoso of his day, and was responsible for raising the level of cello playing. He was praised for his intense, pure sound, flawless intonation, and acrobatic technique. He wrote three Cello Concertos, and ten Fantasias with orchestral accompaniment. In addition he collaborated with Joseph Grégoir in composing fourteen Duets for Piano and Violoncello, and with the violinists Léonard and Henri Vieuxtemps wrote several Duets for Violin and Violoncello on operatic themes. He also produced a variety of popular pieces, including Souvenir de Spa. Of his many students, the best known were Meeren, de Swert, Fischer, and Bekker. He acquired a Stradivari cello, now known as the ‘Servais’ cello.

SITT, HANS (1850-1922)
German violinist and composer, born in Prague and died in Leipzig. Sitt studied at the Prague Conservatory, and held various positions as a violinist and conductor. In 1881 he settled in Leipzig, and organized a series of popular concerts there. He played viola in the Brodsky Quartet, and conducted the Bachverein (1885-1903) and other musical societies. Sitt wrote three Violin Concertos, a Viola Concerto, two Cello Concertos, and published valuable studies for the violin. He also published (with Reinecke) Lyrical, a collection of arrangements of thirty Classical and Romantic pieces for violin and piano.
SOKOLOV, NIKOLAI ALEKSANDROVICH (1859-1922)
Russian composer and pedagogue, born in St. Petersburg. A pupil of Rimsky-Korsakov at the St. Petersburg Conservatory, he later taught harmony there for many years. Sokolov was also a prolific composer in the traditional Russian style. Many of his works were published by Belaieff, among them music for Shakespeare's play The Winter's Tale. In addition he published String Quartets, violin pieces, and a great number of songs.

SPEIDEL, WILHELM (1826-1899)
German pianist and composer, born at Ulm and died in Stuttgart. Speidel was a pupil of Wänner and W. Kuhe, and of Ignaz Lachner (composition). From 1846-54 he taught, first at Thann, Alsatia, then in Munich. In 1854 he became music director at Ulm. He was co-founder of the Stuttgart Conservatory, and a teacher of piano there until he founded his Künstler- und Dilettantenschule für Klavier in 1874. Speidel rejoined the Conservatory in 1884, which he then united with his own school.

SPOHR, LOUIS (1784-1859)
Celebrated German violinist, composer, and conductor, born at Braunschweig and died at Kassel. Spohr's style was characteristic of the transition period between Classicism and Romanticism. He became an early champion of Wagner, producing in Kassel Der fliegende Holländer (1843), and Tannhäuser (1853), despite the opposition of the court. However, he failed to appreciate Weber, or late Beethoven. He was a master of technical resources, and some of his works demonstrate a spirit of bold experimentation (the Historical Symphony; Symphony for Two Orchestras; Quartet Concerto; Nonet; etc). His use of chromaticism influenced Wagner; a striking resemblance to the Tristan motive appears in his opera Der Alchymist (1830). Spohr was also a highly esteemed teacher, and Ferdinand David and Moritz Hauptmann numbered among his pupils. He composed ten symphonies, fifteen Violin Concertos, operas, Cantatas, chamber music, and Lieder.

SQUIRE, WILLIAM HENRY (1871-1941)
English cellist and composer, born at Ross, Herefordshire and died in London. His father was an amateur violinist, who provided his primary music education. He then studied with Hubert Parry at the Royal College of Music, making his début as a cellist in London on February 12, 1891. He became a popular recitalist in England. Squire wrote a Cello Concerto, and many other cello pieces. He retired in 1941, and lived in London.

STANFORD, Sir CHARLES VILLIERS (1852-1924)
British composer, teacher and conductor. He is credited with the composition of a song, The Venetian Dirge, at the age of four, and with giving a piano recital of pieces by Handel, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Mozart and Bach when he was nine. In 1874 he went to Leipzig to study composition under Reinecke and piano under Papperitz. In 1883 he was appointed professor of composition and orchestral playing at the newly opened Royal College of Music in London, and four years later was elected professor of music at Cambridge. Stanford's heritage of Irish folklore, folk music and mysticism was apparent beneath the training and experience he acquired abroad. He was a prolific composer in almost all musical forms.
STARK, LUDWIG (1831-1884)
German pianist, born in Munich and died in Stuttgart. Stark studied with Ignaz and Franz Lachner in Munich. In 1857 he co-founded the Stuttgart Conservatory, where he taught singing and theory. In collaboration with Lebart he edited the Grosse Klavierschule (revised by M. Pauer, 1904). He also brought out a singing method, Deutsche Liederschule (1861), and published the Klassischer Hausschatz (twenty-four transcriptions for piano of movements of classical chamber music works). Stark wrote a number of scared and secular choral pieces, piano music, and Lieder.

STERN, LEO (1862-1904)
English cellist, born in Brighton and died in London. Stern studied cello at the Royal Academy of Music in London with Piatti, and later with Julius Klengel in Leipzig. In 1888 he was an assistant artist on Adelina Patti’s concert tour, and made a solo tour of America in 1897-98. His compositions include cello pieces and songs.

STIASTNY, JOHANN (1774-?)
Bohemian cellist. He played in the Prague Orchestra in 1800, and some years later became Violoncellist to the Grand Duke at Frankfurt. With the end of the short-lived Grand Duchy of Frankfurt (1810-1814), Stiastny moved to Mannheim, where he acquired the title “Musical Director of Nuremberg.” He also spent some time in Great Britain, and dedicated many of his later works (Concertino Op. 7; Trois Duos Concertans Op. 8; Six pieces faciles Op. 9) to Englishmen. His remaining compositions consist of cello solos, Sonatas, and cello duos, some of which contain effects which were new for the period.

STOCKHAUSEN, FRANZ, Sr. (1789-1868)
German singer and harpist, born in Cologne and died at Colmar. In 1822 he organized in Paris the Académie de Chant, and gave concerts as a harpist.

STRAETEN, EDMUND SEBASTIAN JOSEPH VAN DER (1855-1934)
German cellist, born in Düsseldorf and died in London. Van der Straeten studied cello in Cologne and London. As well as the cello he played the viola da gamba, and formed a trio with his son Ludwig and N. Greiffenhagen, which gave performances of music for viol by Baroque composers. He wrote a number of musicological books including; The Technics of Violoncello Playing (1898; 2nd ed., 1905); The Romance of the Fiddle (1911); History of the Violoncello, the Viol da Gamba, Their Precursors and Collateral Instruments (1915); The History of the Violin (2 vols., 1933).

STRAUSS, RICHARD GEORG (1864-1949)
German composer and conductor. Before the age of twenty-one he had been hailed as the successor to Brahms and Wagner, and the tone poems written in his twenties and early thirties immediately entered the national repertory. After 1900 he concentrated his interests on opera, with Der Rosenkavalier becoming his most popular work of this genre. In his later works he succeeded in combining certain features which had always been present in his music: Wagnerian fullness, Mozartian grace, and a personal warmth of feeling.
STRELEZKI, ANTON (1859-1907)
English pianist and composer, born in Croydon, near London. According to some sources, his real name was Arthur Bransby Burnand. He studied with Tausig, Nicolas Rubinstein, Liszt and Clara Schumann, and settled in London, where he was very popular. The place and exact date of his death are unknown. Strelezki published more than two hundred and twenty-five opus numbers of piano music, some of which was widely used in his day. In addition he published songs, and a book entitled Personal Recollections of Chats with Liszt (1895).

SULLIVAN, Sir ARTHUR SEYMOUR (1842-1900)
Famous English composer, born in London. He was elected the first Mendelssohn Scholar in 1856, and studied at the Royal Academy of Music from 1857 under Sterndale Bennett, and at the Leipzig Conservatory from 1858-61 under Moscheles, Hauptmann, Richter and Plaidy. Included among his compositions are Overtures, Cantatas, a String Quartet, the Irish Symphony, and songs. His most popular works are the operettas he composed to librettos of William S. Gilbert.

SULZER, JOSEPH (1850-?)
Born in Vienna, he studied with Schlesinger, and then joined the Italian Opera in Bucharest, where he also taught at the Conservatory. In 1875 Sulzer became a member of the Vienna Opera orchestra, but was forced to resign due to illness. On his recovery he sought the advice of Popper, and in 1880 was appointed solo player at the Imperial Opera. He was also a respected teacher, and a member of the Heimburg Quartet from 1882-1885. Sulzer published various compositions for cello at Breitkopf & Härtel's, D. Rechter's, and Cran'z.

SURETTE, THOMAS WHITNEY (1861-1941)
American music educator, born at Concord, Massachusetts. Surette studied piano with Arthur Foote and composition with J. K. Paine at Harvard University, graduating in 1891. He then was active mainly as a church organist. Spurred by the desire to improve music education in the U.S., he founded in 1914 the Concord Summer School of Music. With A. T. Davison he edited The Concord Series of educational music, which was well received in many schools. Surette was also largely responsible for the introduction of music appreciation courses. He published The Appreciation of Music (with D. G. Mason; 5 vols., N.Y., 1907: ); Course of Study on the Development of Symphonic Music (Chicago, 1915), and Music and Life (Boston, 1917). He also published popular articles on music and musicians, and composed several operas.

SWERT, JULES DE (1843-1891)
Belgian cellist and composer, born at Louvain and died at Ostend. De Swert studied with Servais at the Brussels Conservatory, and entered the Weimar Hofkappelle as first cellist. From there he was appointed professor at the Hochschule für Musik in Berlin (1869-73). In 1888 he became director of the Ostend Music School and a professor at the Ghent and Bruges Conservatories. He wrote two operas, Die Albigeniser (Wiesbaden, Oct. 1, 1878) and Graf Hammerstein (Mainz, 1884); a Symphony, Nordseefahrt; three Cello Concertos, and solo pieces for cello. In addition he re-edited a collection of old cello music and arrangements of classical compositions.
SZYMANOWSKA, MARIA (1789-1831)
Polish pianist and composer, born in Warsaw and died in St. Petersburg. Szymanowska studied piano with local teachers in Warsaw, and began to play in public as a child. In 1822 she toured in Russia, and was appointed court pianist. The following years were spent touring in Europe until 1828, when she settled in St. Petersburg as a pianist and teacher. She was admired by Goethe, who alludes to her in his poem Auszöhnung (Trilogie der Leidenschaft). Szymanowska published twenty-four mazurkas and several character pieces for piano, of which Le Murmure became popular. Her Piano Studies were commended by Schumann.

TÄGLISCHBECK, THOMAS (1799-1867)
German violinist and composer, born in Ansbach. Täglischbeck studied in Munich in 1816, and in the following year became a member of the Isarthortheater orchestra, becoming music director in 1819. Some years later he became solo violinist to the Munich Court and devoted his time to touring and composing. Contemporaries described his playing as being charming, but not outstanding. In the 1860’s he accepted a position as composition teacher at the Dresden Conservatory. Among his works are several operas, symphonies, choral works, Lieder, a Clarinet Quintet, three String Quartets, a Piano Trio, three Violin Sonatas Op. 30 intended as introductory studies to the Beethoven sonatas, and a large-scale Sonata for violin and piano.

TAUBERT, ERNST EDUARD (1838-1934)
German composer and music critic, born at Regenwalde and died in Berlin. Taubert studied theology in Bonn, and music with Albert Dietrich. Later he studied under Friedrich Kiel in Berlin, where he became a teacher at the Stern Conservatory. Taubert wrote for various German music magazines, and was music critic for the Berliner Post. His works include a Piano Quintet, Wind Quintet, Piano Quartet, string quartets, a Piano Trio, Ballade for Orchestra, piano pieces for two- and four-hands, and Lieder.

TELEFSEN, THOMAS DYKE ACLAND (1823-1874)
Norwegian pianist and composer. In 1842 he went to Paris where he studied with his compatriot Charlotte Thygeson, and attended the classes of Kalkbrenner. Between 1844 and 1847 he was taught periodically by Chopin, who became his personal friend and had considerable influence on his musical taste and style. He was regarded as one of the outstanding pianists of his time, being especially admired for his interpretations of Chopin’s music. His publications comprise forty-four works, the majority of them for piano.

THERN, KARL (KÁROLY) (1817-1886)
Hungarian composer, born at Iglau. He entered the University of Pest in 1837, and soon gained recognition for the composition of incidental music for a number of contemporary Hungarian plays. In 1841 he accepted the position of Assistant Conductor of the National Theater in Pest, and composed several operas during his time there. In 1853 he was appointed teacher of harmony and piano at the National Conservatory. His works, which include several operas, incidental music, Lieder, piano works, a symphony and chamber pieces, achieved popularity in his lifetime. Tern died in Vienna.
THOMAS, ARTHUR GORING (1850-1892)
English composer, born at Ratton Park, Sussex and died in London. Thomas was a pupil of Emile Durand in Paris (1874-77), and of Arthur Sullivan and Ebenezer Prout at the Royal Academy of Music in London, and later studied orchestration in Berlin with Max Bruch. His main interest was to create Germanicized English operas. His operas, which never entered the repertoire, were performed in England and Germany. Thomas received strong support from important sources during his lifetime, but his music did not survive his death. In the last year of his life he suffered from a mental illness.

THOMÉ, FRANÇOIS (1850-1909)
French composer, born at Port Louis, Island of Mauritius, and died in Paris. Thomé went to Paris as a youth, and studied at the Conservatory with Marmontel (piano), and Duprato (theory). He achieved success with some of his piano pieces, in particular Simple aveu and Les Lutins, which became extremely popular. Thomé was also much sought-after as a teacher. He wrote several operas that were produced in France in the 1890s.

THORNE, EDWARD HENRY (1834-1916)
English organist and composer, born at Cranbourne, Dorset and died in London. Thorne was a chorister at St. George’s Chapel, and a church organist in London. He was a noted recitalist on piano and organ, especially esteemed for his Bach programs. Thorne was made a D. Mus. by the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1913. He composed sacred choral works, an Overture, two Piano Trios, Violin Sonatas, Cello Sonatas, and published seven books of organ pieces.

TOURS, BERTHOLD (1838-1897)
Belgian violinist, composer, and music editor, born at Rotterdam and died in London. Tours received his musical training from his father. In 1861 he went to London, and in 1878 became musical advisor to Novello & Co., and editor of their publications. He published a Primer of the Violin, and wrote many anthems for Anglican church services.

URBAN, HEINRICH (1837-1901)
Noted German music pedagogue, born in Berlin. Urban studied with Franz Ries (violin), and Laub in Berlin. He worked professionally as a violinist, and at the same time wrote much symphonic and chamber music. In 1881 he became a professor at Kultak’s Academy in Berlin, where he became famous as a theory teacher. Paderewski was among his pupils. His works include a concert overture, Scheherazade, a Symphony, Frühling, and a Violin Concerto.

VALLE DE PAZ, EDGARDO DEL (1861-1920)
Italian writer on music, born in Alexandria, Egypt and died in Florence. Valle de Paz studied at the Naples Conservatory under B. Cesi (piano) and P. Serraio (composition). From 1890 he was a professor at the Florence Conservatory. Three years later he established the Circolo Del Valle at Florence, and in 1896-1914 was director of the journal La Nuova Musica. He published a Scuola praktica del pianoforte, adopted by several Italian music schools. His opera, Oriana, was produced at Florence in 1907.
VANZO, VITTORIO MARIO (1862-1945)
Italian conductor, pianist and composer. He was born in Padua, and studied at the Milan Conservatory. Vanzo, an avid supporter of Wagner, conducted the Italian première of Die Walküre in Turin, 1891, and the Milan première of Göttterdammerung in 1896. He also made many concert tours as a pianist. His compositions include three operas, several smaller orchestral works, chamber music, songs, and a large body of music for piano solo.

VERDI, FORTUNINO GIUSEPPE FRANCESCO (1813-1901)
Giuseppe Verdi, the foremost composer of Italian romantic opera, was born in the village of Le Roncole near Parma. In 1842 he wrote Nabucco, the opera that brought him his first great success, and thereafter he was sought after by all the great opera houses of Italy. He also received foreign commissions, the most notable being Aida (1871) for a new opera house in Cairo. Verdi was elected to a term in the first Italian parliament after the unification of the country in 1861. In recognition of his great popularity, his name had become an acronym for "Vittorio Emanuele, Re D'Italia" ("Vittorio Emanuele, king of Italy"—the rallying cry of the political movement for the unification of Italy).

VIERLING, GEORG (1820-1901)
German organist and composer, born at Frankenthal, Bavaria and died at Wiesbaden. He was a pupil of his father, the organist Jacob Vierling, then studied composition with A. B. Marz in Berlin. Vierling occupied various posts as organist and choral conductor in the German provinces, before settling in Berlin, where he founded and conducted the Bach-Verein. His works include secular Cantatas, choral works with orchestra, a Symphony, several Overtures, a Capriccio for Piano and Orchestra, and Phantasiestück for Cello and Piano.

VIEUXTEMPS, HENRI (1820-1881)
Celebrated Belgian violinist and composer, born at Verviers and died at Mustapha, Algiers. His first teacher was his father, a piano tuner, who soon sent him to Lecloux, with whom he made a concert tour at the age of eight. Vieuxtemps then continued his studies with Bériot in Brussels, and later took harmony lessons from Sechter in Vienna and Reicha in Paris. He appeared as soloist throughout Europe and managed, during his constant travels, to compose violin concertos and other works which became part of the standard repertoire. Vieuxtemps performed many of these himself to the greatest acclaim. In 1846 he was engaged as a professor at the St. Petersburg Conservatory, and remained in Russia for five seasons, during which time he made a strong impact on Russian concert life and violin composition. In 1853 he resumed his concert tours in Europe and America, before a stroke of paralysis forced him to cease performing. Nevertheless he continued to teach, both privately and at the Brussels Conservatory. Jenő Hubay was one of his most prominent pupils. With Bériot, Vieuxtemps stood at the forefront of the modern French school of violin playing. He was frequently referred to as "the king of the violin", and gained a reputation for an extraordinary technique and ability to sustain a melody. Besides his seven Violin Concertos, he wrote many works for violin and orchestra, violin and piano, viola and piano, and numerous brilliant transcriptions of operatic airs.
VILBAC, RENAUD de (Alphonse Zoé Charles) (1829-1884)
French organist and composer, born at Montpellier and died in Paris. He studied piano, organ, and composition at the Paris Conservatoire under Lemoine and Halévy, winning the Grand Prix de Rome at the age of fifteen. In 1856 he became organist at St.-Eugène, Paris, where he remained for fifteen years. De Vilbac wrote two operas: _Au clair de lune_ (1857) and _Almanzor_ (1858). He also published a method for piano, incidental pieces for piano, and transcriptions from operas.

VOGEL, ADOLPHE (1808-1892)
French violinist and composer, born at Lille and died in Paris. Vogel studied at the Paris Conservatoire with A. Kreutzer (violin) and Reicha (theory). After winning popular success with his song _Les Trois Couleurs_ during the July Revolution of 1830, he brought out a series of operas, with which he won acclaim. He also wrote symphonies, chamber music, sacred works, songs, and piano pieces.

VOLKMANN, FRIEDRICH ROBERT (1815-1883)
German composer, born at Lommatzsch and died in Budapest. Volkmann studied organ and piano with his father, a cantor, violin and cello with Friebel, and composition with Anacker. He then studied in Leipzig with K. F. Becker, and was greatly encouraged by Schumann. After teaching music in Prague for two years, he settled in Budapest, where he spent the rest of his life, receiving in 1875 an appointment as professor at the National Academy of Music. His music was highly regarded in his lifetime, but largely forgotten after his death. A thematic index, brought out by his grandnephew, Hans Volkmann, lists among his works two Symphonies, a Cello Concerto, Pieces for Violin and Piano, Cello and Piano, Piano solo and Piano four-hands, two Piano Trios, and choral works.

WAGNER, WILHELM RICHARD (1813-1883)
Richard Wagner, born in Leipzig, was the greatest composer of German opera. In his work Wagner advocated what he called a _Gesamtkunstwerk_, a new synthesis of music, verse and staging. The open-ended melody of the vocal line was woven together by _leitmotifs_ ("leading motifs"), themes that were associated more or less directly with characters, things, ideas or events. He expanded upon a tradition started by Carl Maria von Weber and Heinrich Marschner by looking to myths and legends for his dramatic materials. Wagner was a controversial figure in his own lifetime. His use of extreme chromaticism, irregular resolution of dissonance, and continuously shifting tonal centers, led ultimately to the breakdown of tonality. He was an unscrupulous individual and a notorious anti-Semite.
WALLACE, WILLIAM VINCENT (1812-1865)
Irish composer, born at Waterford and died at Château de Bagen (Haute-Garonne), France. His father was a bandmaster, and Wallace was brought up in a musical environment. When he was fifteen his family moved to Dublin, and he soon began his professional career, playing violin in theater orchestras, and organ in churches. One of his earliest compositions, The Harp in the Air, later became famous when he incorporated it into his opera Maritana, which was very well received in London. He travelled extensively as a concert violinist, interspersing his tours with productions of his operas in London. One of these, Lurline (Covent Garden, February 1860), received great critical acclaim. His piano music once enjoyed considerable popularity.

WEBER, CARL MARIA FRIEDRICH ERNST von (1786-1826)
German composer, founder of the German Romantic school, born at Eutin, Oldenburg and died in London. Weber is best known for his romantic operas. His first opera, Das Waldmädchen (The Forest Maiden), was produced in 1800. In 1804 he was given his first appointment as a conductor at the Stadttheater in Breslau. In addition to conducting, composing and playing the piano, he also wrote musical criticism and the beginnings of a novel, A Musician's Life. Weber used the orchestra with great skill and imagination, most notably in Der Freischütz (The Freeshooter), whose libretto was based on a book of ghost stories. The result was a dramatic mixture of mystery, love, and suspense, which successfully established romantic opera in Germany. As well as operas, Weber wrote much incidental music, three Masses, Cantatas, two Symphonies, several Concertos and Concertinos, works for piano solo and duet, and numerous Lieder and part-songs. His compositions for piano influenced Mendelssohn and Liszt.

WEISSENBORN, CHRISTIAN JULIUS (1837-1888)
Born at Friedrichs-Tanneck, Thuringia. From 1857-1887 he was the first bassoonist in the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra, and teacher at the Leipzig Conservatory from 1882 until his death six years later.

WERNER, JOSEF (1837-1922)
German cellist, born at Würzburg and died in Munich. He studied at the Würzburg Conservatory, and became a teacher at the Munich Musik Hochschule. He published a Praktische Violoncell-Schule (with seven supplements); Der erste Anfang im Violoncellspiel; several books of Übungen für Violoncell: numerous pieces for cello with piano, and a Quartet for four cellos.

WHITEHOUSE, WILLIAM EDWARD (1859-1935)
English cellist, born in London. Whitehouse studied at the Royal Academy of Music in London with Piatti and Pezzi, and joined its faculty after graduation. He was frequently invited to replace Piatti as soloist when the latter was out of the country. From 1889 until 1904 Whitehouse was the cellist in the London Trio, with Achille Simonetti (violin) and Amina Goodwin (piano), with whom he toured all over Europe. He was highly regarded as a teacher, and among his pupils were Felix Salmond and Beatrice Harrison. He wrote a number of attractive cello pieces, edited several cello works of the eighteenth-century, and published a memoir, Recollections of a Violoncellist (London, 1930).
WIDOR, CHARLES MARIE (1844-1937)

Distinguished French organist, pedagogue, and composer, born at Lyons, and died in Paris. As a boy, Widor learned to improvise on the organ. He studied later in Brussels under Lemmens (organ) and Fétis (composition). While still in his youth, he was appointed organist at his father's church in Lyons (1860), and gained a fine reputation for his concerts in France. In 1890 he succeeded César Franck as professor of organ at the Paris Conservatoire, and in 1896 became professor of counterpoint, fugue, and composition. He was active also as a music critic for L'Estafette, under the pen name Aulétès, as well as conducting the oratorio society Concordia. He had many distinguished pupils, including Albert Schweitzer, with whom he collaborated in editing the first five volumes of a definitive eight-volume edition of J. S. Bach's organ works (published by G. Schirmer, N.Y.). As a composer he is best known for his organ music, especially his eight Symphonies (Suites). He also wrote opera, chamber music and song cycles.

WIENIAWSKI, HENRYK (1835-1880)

Henryk Wieniawski, Polish violinist and composer, was trained at the Paris Conservatoire, graduating with first prize at age eleven. In 1848 he made his début in Saint Petersburg, where he became violinist to the Tsar. He also taught at the Conservatory there, and later in Brussels as Henri Vieuxtemps's successor. Wieniawski toured extensively, appearing in the United States in the 1870s, and gave joint recitals with Anton Rubinstein. His contribution to the improvement of bowing technique was considerable, and he was a prolific composer of violin music. His Concerto in D Minor (op. 22) is his most popular work.

WIENIAWSKI, JÓZEJF (1837-1912)

Polish pianist and composer, brother of Henryk Wieniawski, born in Lublin, and died in Brussels. He studied at the Paris Conservatoire with Zimmermann, Marmontel, and Alkan (piano), and with LeCouper (composition). Later he studied with Liszt at Weimar (1855-56), returning to Paris in 1858. In 1866 he settled in Moscow as a teacher at the Conservatory, but soon established a flourishing piano school of his own. He later settled in Brussels, where he taught at the Conservatory. He also made numerous concert tours throughout Europe.

WIHTOL, JOSEPH (1863-1948)

Foremost Latvian composer and pedagogue, born at Volmar and died at Lübeck. He studied with Rimsky-Korsakov at the St. Petersburg Conservatory (1880-86), and was employed there as an instructor after graduation, succeeding Rimsky-Korsakov in 1908 as professor of composition. Among his students were Prokofiev and Miaskovsky. He was also music critic for the German daily St. Petersburger Zeitung. In 1918 he left Russia to become director of the Latvian Opera in Riga, and a year later founded the National Conservatory there. Many Latvian composers were his students. In 1944, with the approach of the Soviet armies to Riga, Wihtol went to Germany, where he remained until his death. His music follows the harmonic tradition of the Russian school, while employing Latvian folk-song patterns. Most of his works, which include a Symphony, Cantatas and songs, were published by Belaieff.
WILLIAMS, JOSEPH [pseud. PASCAL, FLORIAN] (1847-1923)
He succeeded his father as head of music publishers, Lucy Williams & Son, a firm founded by his grandmother, Lucy Williams, in 1808. Williams published approximately two hundred songs, piano pieces, cantatas, comic operas and operettas under the pseudonym of Florian Pascal.

WITTE, GEORG HEINRICH (1843-1929)
Dutch organist and composer, born in Utrecht and died in Essen. He studied at The Hague, then at the Leipzig Conservatory with Moscheles and Plaidy (piano), Hauptmann and Reinecke (composition). In 1871 he was appointed conductor of the Musikverein at Essen, a post which he held for forty years. His works include a Cello Concerto, a choral work, An die Sonne, a Piano Quartet, numerous piano pieces and songs.

WITTING, KARL (CARL) (1823-1907)
German violinist and composer, born in Jülich and died in Dresden. He studied in Paris under A. Reichel, returning to Germany in 1855. Witting lived in Berlin, Hamburg and Glogau, and finally settled in Dresden in 1861 as a teacher. He published a Cello Sonata, and instructive pieces for violin and piano.

WÖLFL, JOSEPH (1773-1812)
Austrian pianist and composer, born in Salzburg and died in London. He was a pupil of Leopold Mozart and Michael Haydn. As a pianist he was considered to be Beethoven's rival. Wölfli settled in Paris for several years, where he produced two operas and was acclaimed as a virtuoso. In 1805 he went to London, and almost immediately established himself as a performer and teacher. He was, however, something of an eccentric and became involved in various kinds of scandal. He died in obscurity at the age of thirty-eight. In his professional life, he was a sensationalist, and liked to give fanciful titles to his works. Wölfli named one of his sonatas Neplusultra, claiming it to be the most difficult piece ever written. His compositions include operas, Piano Concertos, ballets, orchestral works, chamber music, piano pieces and studies, and Lieder.

WOLFRUM, PHILIPP (1854-1919)
German musicologist and composer, born in Schwarzenbach-am-Wald, and died at Samaden. He studied with Rheinberger and Wüllner in Munich, and received his Ph. D. from Leipzig University in 1890. He published a biography of Johann Sebastian Bach.

ZELENSKI, WŁADYSLAW (1837-1921)
Polish composer and pedagogue, born at Grodkowice, near Cracow, and died in Cracow. He studied with Mirecki in Cracow, Krejci in Prague, and Reber in Paris. In 1871 he returned to Poland, and taught theory at the Warsaw Conservatory from 1872-81. In 1881 he founded the Cracow Conservatory, and remained its director until his death. He also taught piano and theory there, and enjoyed a fine reputation as a pedagogue. Among his pupils were Stojowski, Opinski, and Szopski. He composed four operas, two Symphonies, Overtures, Cantatas, a Piano Concerto, chamber music and songs.
ZIMMERMANN, AGNES (1845-1925)
German-English, pianist and composer, born in Cologne and died in London. As a young girl she went to England, and studied at the Royal Academy of Music in London with Ernst Pauer (piano) and G. Macfarren (composition). She toured England with great success, and was especially praised for her performances of classical works. Zimmermann edited the sonatas of Mozart and Beethoven and the complete works of Schumann (for Novello). She was also a competent composer, and left a Piano Trio, three Violin Sonatas, a Cello Sonata, and many piano pieces.

ZOELLER, CARL (1840-1889)
German-British composer, born in Berlin and died in London. Zoeller studied violin with Hubert Ries in Berlin. After some years as a violinist with various opera troupes in Germany, he went to London, where he settled in 1873. In 1879 he became bandmaster of the 7th (Queen's Own) Hussars. His interests extended to the viola d'amore, on which he performed frequently. Zoeller published an opera, operetta, Violin Concerto, and songs, as well as a text entitled The Viola d'Amour, Its Origin and History, and Art of Playing It.

APPENDIX FOUR: SONATA CRITIQUES

Joseph Wölfl: Sonata in D minor Opus 31

Joseph Wölfl was reputed to have been at least as fine a pianist as Beethoven, with a great talent for extemporisation. He had extremely large hands, and could stretch an eleventh on the keyboard. His playing drew praise from Beethoven who, on at least one occasion, publicly improvised with him on two pianos. The two men appear to have respected and admired each other, and Wölfl dedicated his Opus 6 to Beethoven.

The Sonata in D minor Opus 31 dates from 1805, some eight years after, and four years before, the Beethoven Sonatas Opus 5 and Opus 69 respectively. This is possibly the first large-scale attempt at a true duo relationship for cello and piano. Earlier sonatas, such as those by Boccherini, are actually solo cello works with keyboard accompaniment, whereas the Beethoven Opus 5 favor the piano. Although a version for violin and piano was published, the work was conceived with the cello in mind, and the violin version was probably an attempt by the publisher to boost sales. Stylistically representative of Sturm und Drang, Wölfl's Sonata Opus 31 possesses a wonderful freshness of spirit, with a radiantly expressive slow movement that hints at romantic possibilities. Beethoven had not yet attempted a slow movement for this combination of instruments, and in fact did not do so until his Opus 102 No 2 composed ten years later in 1815.

From the very first notes of the short introductory Largo, an atmosphere of gravity, verging on the tragic, is created, yielding in due course to the explosive character of the Allegro. The Allegro uses the same thematic material as the opening, developing it into a movement full of vivacity and vigor. The middle movement, an Andante in Bb major, turns this same thematic material into a beautifully soaring melody that explores the widest possible range of the cello. Travelling through the keys of F major, F minor, Gb major, Db major and Eb minor, it highlights Wölfli’s ability to use harmonic development for expressive means. The final movement, a playful Rondo, fluctuates between D minor and D major. Towards the end, a contrasting, pastorale-like section in F major further develops the principal motive of the opening Largo. The movement ends brilliantly in D major.

1805, the year of composition of the cello sonata, was the same year that Wölfli arrived in London, and the culmination of his most successful years as an artist. He was by nature a man of great charm, who was fond of the good things in life, and stories abound concerning his penchant for card games. This sonata demonstrates his ability to write music of quality, although his lack of sufficient self-criticism was probably responsible for the relegation of his music to virtual obscurity.
Ferdinand Ries: Sonata in G minor Opus 125

The Sonata Opus 125 by Ferdinand Ries dates from 1823, when Ries was living in London. In this work the immense influence of Beethoven on Ries can be felt, in tandem with a forward-looking romantic element, seen in particular through piano writing that is almost Chopinesque. Ries’s relationship with Beethoven began in his childhood, as his father, Franz Ries, had been Beethoven’s teacher, and had befriended him in time of bereavement. Ferdinand became Beethoven’s piano student and later his secretary and music copyist. He had profound admiration for the master, and during his years in London acted as Beethoven’s agent. A valuable historical source, and work of great interest, is the Biographische Notizen von Ludwig van Beethoven, which Ries published in conjunction with Dr. Franz Gerhard Wegeler (Coblenz, 1838), containing his correspondence with the composer.

As a performer and composer Ries was enormously successful in his lifetime, a fact given credence by his rags to riches life story, and most probably explained by his ability to satisfy the current taste in musical fashion. He gave his début performance in London on March 14, 1814, and an article in the magazine the Harmonicon of March 1824 stated: “Mr Ries is justly celebrated as one of the finest piano-performers of the present day. His hand is powerful, and his execution is certain, often surprising. But his playing is most distinguished from that of all others by its romantic wildness...He produces an effect upon those who enter his style, which can only be compared to that arising from the most unexpected combinations and transitions of the Aeolian harp.”
The Sonata Opus 125 has a number of characteristics in common with the Beethoven Opus 5 No 2, written some thirty years earlier. These include the choice of G minor, (a key not frequently used by Ries), a slow introduction with similar rhythmic figures [SEE EXAMPLES 1A, B], and an Allegro theme that bears a striking resemblance to the Beethoven theme in inversion. [SEE EXAMPLES 2A, B]. The primary building block of each movement is triadic. A noble statement in root position opens the piece, and is immediately heard in a descending version in the cello. [SEE EXAMPLE 1A]. This same descending version forms the theme of the Allegro, creating an atmosphere imbued with romantic longing. [SEE EXAMPLE 2A]. The second inversion of the triad constitutes the basis for both the second movement (in the dominant key of D major), and the finale, a virtuosic Rondo.

The opening Grave, although shorter and less tragic than the Beethoven introduction, expresses a similarity of mood through its contrast between the dotted rhythmic figures and broad, expansive melody. The first movement juxtaposes slow and fast sections, and a return to the slow, introductory material towards the end of the movement is almost certainly inspired by Beethoven’s Sonata Opus 13, the Pathétique. Here the similarities between the two composers come to an end. A beautifully melodic Andante in the key of D major acts as centrepiece to the sonata, striking in its touching simplicity. Ries produces some of his finest writing in this movement, according a role to the cello unmatched in his earlier sonatas for cello and piano. In the last movement, a Rondo in the original G minor, the writing returns to a more typically brilliant and virtuosic style.
Ries, although a polished and talented composer, lacks the seriousness of Beethoven, as well as his high artistic standard. The majority of his works were written to satisfy his public, but in some instances, this one included, I believe he has transcended these demands to create a work that is universally appealing.

Ignaz Moscheles: Sonata in E major Opus 121

The Sonata in E Major, Opus 121, was composed in 1851. Moscheles at the time was fifty-seven years of age and a member of the faculty of the Conservatory of Music in Leipzig. While the major part of Moscheles's output is for piano solo, the fact that he published no less than five works for cello and piano between the years 1814 to 1863 indicates a distinct affinity on his part for that instrument. It is recorded that he used the term 'a very violoncello,' to express his appreciation of the improved sound quality of the Erard piano of the 1830s.

The Sonata Opus 121 was the last of Moscheles's large-scale compositions, and though not numbered as such, was his second composition in this genre. An earlier three movement Sonata in Bb major, Opus 34, was published in 1814 by Artaria in Vienna. Unlike the Bb major Sonata, in which the piano has the dominant role, the E Major sonata is a true duo with both instruments sharing an equal division of responsibility. Moscheles performed this sonata with the cellists Julius Rietz and Friedrich Grützmacher before bringing it to publication, and it is a reasonable assumption that the cello part was influenced by their suggestions.

The Sonata is in four movements and these are markedly varied in content and texture. A majestic and lyrical first movement is followed by a scintillating scherzo marked 'in a dancing manner.' The third movement entitled Ballade in the Bohemian manner, alternates slow and fast materials in a fashion suggestive of the dumka, with a haunting opening theme in the style of a Czech folksong. The finale is a virtuosic tour-de-force that juxtaposes material of great vivacity against a noble, chorale-like theme. As in all of Moscheles's important works, there is a fascinating blend of the innovative and the derivative. For example, parts of the slow movement look forward to Dvorak and Humperdinck, while the opening theme of the finale looks back to Rossini. Moscheles here, as so often in his music, acts as a link between musical eras.

The Sonata was dedicated to Robert Schumann, who in accepting the dedication wrote:
"You have given me much joy and done me a great honour by dedicating your sonata to me. In so doing, you provided me with fresh incentive for my own aspirations in which you have always taken a benevolent interest. More than thirty years ago in Karlsbad, when I was a stranger to you, I refused to part with a concert ticket for a long, long time because you had touched it, so I kept it as if it were a relic. Little did I dream that so famous an artist would one day do me such an honour. Please accept my deepest gratitude."

That this work had a measure of contemporary success can be ascertained from the fact that it was published in three different versions. The original version, for cello and piano, was jointly published by the firms of Kistner in Leipzig, and Cramer & Co. in London. Two arrangements, one for violin and piano by Ferdinand David, and one for piano four-hands by Moscheles, were also published by Kistner.
