Music at the University of Washington

For over 125 years, aspiring musicians have come to the University of Washington School of Music to polish their skills as performers and broaden their knowledge as students. It is a comprehensive music school with specialists on every instrument, and opportunities to study every musical discipline from jazz to opera and from ethnomusicology to music education.

The UW School of Music shares all the advantages of a small college and a large university. With approximately 350 music majors, the SOM offers an intimate learning atmosphere; our faculty-to-student ratio averages one teacher for every seven music majors. At the same time, the University of Washington has over 33,000 students and is the largest university in the Northwest. Students at UW have all the advantages of attending a great university located in a major city, while benefiting from highly personalized teaching in their major fields. Members of the School of Music faculty are talented artist-teachers who enjoy national and international reputations in performance, music education, composition and music academics. Many of our faculty are regularly invited around the world to present clinics and give performances. Students receive weekly private lessons with a teacher who may have recently returned from an international tour, a studio recording session, a world-wide conference of scholars, or a weekend of performing before live audiences. Students come to the UW to work and learn in a highly stimulating artistic environment.

William O. Smith

M. A., University of California, Berkeley; B. A., Mills College.

William O. Smith studied composition with Darius Milhaud and Roger Sessions and joined the faculty of the University of Washington School of Music in 1966 where he has been co-director of the Contemporary Group since that time. He has written over 100 works for various combinations of instruments and voice, and has received such awards as the Prix de Paris, Prix de Rome, and two Guggenheims. In addition to his work as a composer, he is a legendary clarinetist in his own time, both for his contributions to extended instrumental techniques as well as his jazz work with Dave Brubeck and others.

Richard Karpen

M. A. and D. M. A., Stanford University; B. A., City University of New York

Richard Karpen studied composition with Gheorghe Costinescu, Charles Dodge, Morton Subotnick, and Leland Smith. His compositions are performed frequently throughout the United States and in Europe at major festivals and conferences. Among the grants and prizes Karpen has received are those from the ASCAP Foundation for Young Composers, the American New Music Consortium, the Bouges Competition (France), the NEWCOMP Competition, the National Flute Association, the Luigi Russolo Contest (Italy), The Fulbright Foundation, and, most recently (1988), Stanford University's School of Humanities and Sciences "Prix de Paris". Professor Karpen's works have been recorded by Le Chant du Monde (France), WERGO (West Germany), and Perspectives of New Music.

PROGRAM NOTES

SERVED ALL DAY

(after "Breakfast" by John Rahn)

by Michael Golden

This piece is essentially a theme and variation, using as source material the final thirty-four measures of the above-mentioned work for piano. After two false starts, there is a complete statement of the original theme (in approximately the original tempo, if not orchestration), followed by a much slower restatement of the theme, overlaid with a variety of temporally altered sections and gestures. But who’s counting, anyway?

For the “technically” minded, this was recorded at the Edmonds Community College Electronic Music Studio, using a Fairwell 1600 and Korg M1 for sound sources, and an Atari ST with Hybrid Arts “Miditrack” software for sequencing and a variety of MIDI temporal manipulation.
