5. AN ELLINGTON PORTRAIT (1965) ................................... 9:12
   FLOYD E. WERLE (b. 1929)
Written in response to the events of 9/11, Testament is David Maslanka’s statement of belief in the healing power of music. The score is inscribed with a poem written by the composer:

When I consider the darkness that we carry,
The pain we inflict – on those close to us, and on those we don’t even know,
The death we bring through rape, ignorance and indifference,
I say “Please God, help us to melt the rage into love,
And love into understanding and acceptance.”

When I consider a world where we are at each other’s mercy,
Where evil can be done to anyone, by anyone, anywhere,
I say, “Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us.”
Teach us how to forgive; teach us how to be forgiven,
Because it is not a simple business….

When I consider music, my center, my life,
The great harmonizer, the chaled of living energy,
The open channel of the soul, God’s voice in each of us,
Bringing souls all over the world to a peaceful union,
A living past, a living present, a living future,
I say, “How beautiful it is! How beautiful it is! How beautiful it is!

[David Maslanka]

David Maslanka was born in New Bedford, Massachusetts in 1943. He attended the Oberlin College Conservatory where he studied composition with Joseph Wood. He spent a year at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria, and did graduate work in composition at Michigan State University with H. Owen Reed.

David Maslanka’s compositions are published by Carl Fischer, Inc., Kjos Music Company, Marimba Productions, Inc., the North American Saxophone Alliance, and OU Percussion Press, and have been recorded on Albany, Cambria, CRI, Mark, Novisse, and Klavier labels. He has served on the faculties of the State University of New York at Genesee, Sarah Lawrence College, New York University, and Kingsborough College of the City University of New York. He now lives in Missoula, Montana. David Maslanka is a member of ASCAP.

In 1844, eighteen years after the death in London of Carl Maria von Weber, a patriotic movement in Germany resulted in the transference of his remains to his native land. In December of that year (1884) an impressive ceremony took place in Dresden in which Richard Wagner took a leading part. Besides reading the solemn oration and conducting a double chorus, Wagner composed the Trauersinfonie for eighty wind instruments and twenty muffled drums, this large ensemble providing the music for a solemn torch-light procession. The work is based on two themes from Weber’s opera Euryanthe, and thus represents a musical homage to the earlier composer. The score remained unpublished until 1926, and the work has remained among the least known of all of Wagner’s compositions.

Bells for Stokowski is a tribute to one of the most influential and controversial conductors of the 20th century. Born in London, Leopold Stokowski (1882-1977) began his career as an organist. Moving to America, Stokowski was fired from his organ post at St. Bartholomew's Church in New York in 1908, after he concluded a service with “Stars and Stripes Forever.” As maestro of the Philadelphia Orchestra (1912-36) he became known for his brilliant interpretations of classical music, his enthusiasm for new concert music, and for taking risks by constantly pushing the envelope of what was acceptable in the concert hall.

In Philadelphia he created a sensation by conducting world premieres of orchestral works by composers such as Stravinsky and Varese. He also enraged classical purists by conducting his lavish Romantic orchestral transcriptions of Bach. It was in Philadelphia that he created the famous "Stokowski sound," making the orchestra sound like a pipe organ. Stokowski was so intrigued by timbral and visual complexity that he often experimented with the seating of players by moving sections of the orchestra to different parts of the stage. He also started one of America's first wind ensembles in Philadelphia. Stokowski appeared as a conductor in various Hollywood films such as "Fantasia", the 1940 collaboration with Walt Disney that resulted in the orchestral soundtrack being recorded in stereophonic sound for the first time.

In Bells for Stokowski I imagine Stokowski in Philadelphia visiting the Liberty Bell at sunrise, and listening to all the bells of the city resonate. To create various bell effects, I frame the ensemble with two percussionists positioned stereophonically on the stage performing on identical ringing percussion instruments such as tubular bells, crotales, bell trees, and various non-pitched metals. I also echo Stokowski's musical vision and legacy in order to look to the past and the future of American concert music.

In the first section I introduce an original theme that I have composed in the style of Bach. This baroque fantasy is modulated in my musical language through a series of tonal and atonal variations. In the second part of the first section, we also hear the ensemble play a long hymn-like tune in unison that is developed as the composition unfolds. Later I also introduce my own "transcription" of Bach's C Major Prelude from The Well-Tempered Klavier. I employ multiple musical canons, polyrhythms, and counterpoints to achieve a complex timbral layering. Through unusual orchestrations and an alternation between chamber and tutti configurations in the ensemble, I recreate the musical effect of Stokowski's experimental seating rearrangements. In the coda I evoke the famous "Stokowski sound," by making the ensemble resound like an enormous, rumbling gothic organ.

In the last chords of the composition we hear the final echoes of a long legacy of great performances by Stokowski.

[Michael Daugherty]

Born in 1954 in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, MICHAEL DAUGHERTY is the son of a dance-band drummer and the oldest of five brothers, all professional musicians. He studied music composition at North Texas State University, the Manhattan School of Music and IRCAM in Paris ultimately receiving his doctorate from Yale University in 1986. During this time he also collaborated with jazz arranger Gil Evans in New York, and pursued further studies with composer György Ligeti in Hamburg, Germany. After teaching music composition for several years at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, Daugherty joined the School of Music at the University of Michigan in 1991, where he is currently Professor of Composition. In 1999 he began a four-year tenure as composer-in-residence with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

In 1923 GORDON JACOB contributed to the tercentenary of William Byrd's death with a sensitive setting of six pieces from the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book that he entitled SUITE: WILLIAM BYRD. The pieces were selected from the seventy in the book because they seemed appropriate to the tonal framework of the British military band. The first movement of the suite, EARLE OF OXFORD'S MARCH, is taken from a collection of keyboard pieces that Byrd conceived as a single work titled The Battell. The stately magnificence of this steadily measured music captures the great dignity of a distinguished personage. Beautifully scored for wind band, this movement is delicate in nature, yet rises to an impassioned climax at the end of the movement.

The original DIVERTIMENTO for Strings, Winds and Percussion was commissioned by the Des Moines Symphony Orchestra and premiered in September 1993. The Iowa State University Band premiered the composer's transcription of the work at the College Band Directors North Central Convention in Omaha, Nebraska in February of 1994. The work was written as a tribute to three great American composers, Aaron Copland, Leonard Bernstein and George Gershwin who shared a common interest in jazz. In the Divertimento, ROGER CICHI utilizes the musical notes C (Copland), B (Bernstein) and G (Gershwin) to form the nucleus for much of the thematic and harmonic material. The first movement, Exaltation, opens with a forceful fanfare with an exciting brass and percussion contrapuntal juxtaposition. A lyrical chorale follows before the return of the opening fanfare. Follies, the second movement, is very animated in rhythm, style and tempo. Some ninety-two meter changes are woven through six different time signatures. Remembrance, the third movement, strays from the C, B, G note combination, but continues the use of idiomatic blues elements to form a jazz ballad highlighted by a beautifully lyric flute solo. Salutation, a syncopated jazz groove, concludes the work in a setting reminiscent of several great works by the aforementioned American composers.

JOHN BARNES CHANCE, was born in Beaumont, Texas in 1932 and his early musical experiences began at age nine with piano lessons. Many of his teachers thought he would go on to become a concert pianist, but a broken hand suffered in high school limited his development. He played percussion in his junior high and high school bands, but was more interested in composing. The school orchestra at his high school graduation premiered the first movement of his first symphony.

Incantation and Dance, Chance's first work for band won the Ostwald Award in 1965. Other notable band pieces include Variations on a Korean Folk Song (1967), based on material gathered while he was stationed in Korea with the Eighth Army Band, and Blue Lake Overture (1971). ELEGY was commissioned by the West Genesee Senior High School Band and is based on an earlier piece Blessed Are They Who Mourn (1960), written for mixed chorus, string orchestra, four horns and bass drum. The piece is an effective combination of quiet contemplation and stirring emotion. Shortly after its publication, Chance was electrocuted while working on an electric fence in his yard. With this premature death one of the rising stars of the band movement was lost, a person who would surely have contributed many more fine compositions to the repertoire.

A native Chicagoan born in 1954, MARK CAMPHOUSE currently serves as Associate Professor of Music and Director of Bands at Radford University in Virginia. He received his formal music training at Northwestern University and is considered one of the foremost composers for the modern wind band. Camphouse has written for such groups as The United States Marine Band, The United States Army Band, the Florida Bandmasters association, and the St. Louis Youth Wind Ensemble.

On December 1, 1955, Rosa Parks was arrested for refusing to give up her seat to a white man on a segregated city bus in Montgomery, Alabama. Mrs. Parks earned the title “Mother of a Movement” for her act of personal courage, sparking the civil rights movement of the 1950’s. Self- described as a “quasi-tone poem”, Camphouse composed MOVEMENT FOR ROSA in three distinct movements. Section I evokes Rosa’s early years, from her birth, 1913, in Tuskegee, Alabama, through her marriage, 1932 in Pine Level, Alabama. Section II portrays years of racial strife in Montgomery and the quest for social equality. The third section is one of quiet strength and serenity. The hymn, We Shall Overcome is heard in shorter segments at first, then in entirety toward the end of the work. The end of the piece serves as an ominous reminder of racism’s lingering presence in modern American society.

FLOYD WERLE, born in Billings, Montana in 1929 received his formal musical training at the University of Michigan. After attending college, he entered the United States Air Force where he ultimately served as chief arranger of the U.S. Air Force Band in Washington, D.C.. During this time he made many contributions to band literature through publications for that media.

Duke Ellington was one of few jazz artists whose style never seemed to become dated as he was always able to blend his own art with new influences and trends. Songs he wrote as long as sixty-five years ago are continue to occupy a singular place in the repertoire of many of the foremost jazz musicians. Floyd Werle’s setting of AN ELLINGTON PORTRAIT includes eight- but by no means all- of his most memorable: “It Don’t Mean a Thing”, “Sophisticated Lady”, “Mood Indigo” (his first hit), “Azure”, “I Let a Song Go Out of my Heart”, “Solitude”, “Caravan”, and “In a Sentimental Mood”.
