PREFACE

I began the research for this bibliography in the early 1980s, when I was working on an article entitled Washington State Labor Politics during World War II. I kept my source list because I had previously written a bibliography on Washington State Labor covering the period from 1885-1935. This bibliography had helped me write my dissertation, and I thought that I might add the new sources to a second addition at some point in the future. After completing the article, I donated my source list to the Northwest Collection in Suzzallo Library, at the University of Washington.

More recently, I had also worked with Prof. Robert E. Burke and Prof. Richard Lowitt in publishing their bibliography on the New Era and New Deal periods and had become interested bibliographies themselves. Afterwards, I found myself consulting these bibliographies at frequent intervals while working on other projects. I noticed that they included sources beyond the subject matter of their titles. Not only did they include sources pertaining to events occurring before and after the war; it also included a far broader range of subjects than labor politics. I began to think that I should publish this information in a separate bibliography.

Latterly, I have found that the original typewritten version still in my possession had become illegible through age and the electronic version inaccessible through obsolescence. My original personal computer died many years ago; my current personal computer no longer can read either the original 5.25” floppy diskettes or the original C/PM operating system. In short, I found that I could no longer use my source list effectively.

Luckily, I was able to obtain a usable copy from the Northwest Collection of Suzzallo Library at the University of Washington. Hoping to make the information it contained more widely available, I have therefore reproduced the original document using optical character recognition software and significantly edited the manuscript by correcting typographical errors, supplying new information, and annotating many of the entries. I have also added unpublished as well as published sources and provided a much needed index. I have also included a few online sources which may be of interest to some researchers.

I hope that this new version proves more useful and longer lasting than the original.

I wish to offer my sincerely thanks to the University of Washington Libraries for giving me access to my original manuscript source list which has made this book possible.

INTRODUCTION

I intend this bibliography as a guide to historical research in the Washington State labor history from the Great Depression to the Cold War. I have taken the passage of the Wagner Labor Relations Act in 1935 as my beginning point; I end with the beginning of the Cold War in 1948. This bibliography directs researchers toward historical resources, both published and unpublished, including manuscripts, theses and dissertations, articles, books, newspapers and periodicals, and websites, relating to the workers, labor organizations, and issues, activities, and events that relate to workers in Washington State during this period.

I have mined numerous resources to write this bibliography, including both published and unpublished sources. However, this bibliography is not an equal opportunity resource. It is fair to say that I have relied most heavily upon the resources of the University of Washington library and the result is skewed in favor of Washington State labor history. Surprisingly, however, I have found that the sources also tell a larger story. To properly the necessary resources to tell the Washington State labor story, I found that I had to include resources bearing on the wider Pacific Northwest and Pacific Coast regions. Where Washington State’s labor unions were involved in multi-state or coast-wide industries, such as the longshore, maritime, fishing, and trucking industries, among others, this proved to be essential. Thus, while I have focused on Washington State labor, I have included a significant number of source materials relating to the socio-economic conditions, laws, political movements, and issues faced by workers throughout the Pacific Northwest from San Francisco north to the Bering Sea and East to Idaho. Researchers interested in researching the other states in the region should also consult the various state archives, state libraries, and university libraries.

I have also attempted to define “labor” in as broad a manner as possible, given the availability of the sources. I have included materials relating to workers in every organized and most unorganized trades, including the building and metal trades, machinists, transit workers, nurses, office workers, public employees, teamsters, seamen, sailors, fishermen, longshoremen, warehousemen, ferrymen, shipbuilders, shipyards, farm workers, cannery workers, the organizations that represented them and the individuals and organizations that employed them. I have included materials on the unemployed, the unorganized, the homeless, children, and the poor: groups that are not normally considered to be part of the labor movement. I have also made a special effort to include materials on the men and women from the various racial, ethnic, religious and political groups who make up the population of the Pacific Northwest.

This book is based upon original research that I did for my dissertation during 1975-1978. I did much of the research in the Northwest Collection and Manuscript Collection of Suzzallo Library at the University of Washington. I also found many of the citations in the footnotes of other scholars. I have also included sources uncovered during additional research that I have done in the years since. In the early 1980s, while preparing to write an article on labor in the Pacific Northwest during World War II, I selected the best sources from my dissertation as a basis for my article and produced a list of the published sources. I also produced a similar list of printed materials and clipping files relating to maritime labor in the Pacific Northwest held in the Northwest Collection. I also added citations that I had found since 1978. I produced typewritten lists of these sources and intended to combine them into a revised bibliography but eventually dropped the project when I left Seattle to take a job in Cincinnati. Before I left Seattle in 1985, however, I donated copies of my typewritten lists to the Northwest Collection and they are still on file there.
Over the years since, I have continued my research and have found many new citations and sources. I have added these to those in the original lists to create this new publication. As a result the present publication includes materials held by other repositories and in other formats than printed materials and clipping files. It also includes materials published as late as 2011. The present publication even cites a few manuscript collections and websites. However, it remains focused on printed sources. Over the years, I have used these sources on a number of occasions and found them to be of continuing use. I hope that my readers will find them equally useful.

I have designed this bibliography as a guide to research for students and professional historical researchers. It does not pretend to be an exhaustive treatment of the subject. I hope, however, that it at least touches on all the major subjects relating to maritime labor in the Pacific Northwest.

I have arranged the citations according to format: Unpublished Materials and Published Materials and arranged various subcategories within those headings. Of course, most of the citations refer to multiple subjects. To access these, I have provided an index which highlights those subjects not obvious from the subject listing.

I have attempted to standardize the citation format and to provide as much information as space would allow. I hope that I have eliminated all the errors in the text, but undoubtedly some have slipped past my attention. I take full responsibility for any errors remaining in the text. I encourage readers to forward to me any errors they find in the text and to bring to my attention any new publications or sources that bear on the subject. I will make every effort to include them in a second edition.
UNPUBLISHED SOURCES

Union Records

Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 587 records, 1941-2011. Founded in 1892, Amalgamated Transit Union, Local 587 is the largest ATU local on the Pacific Coast. The local had 4000 active and 300 retired members in King, Clallam, and Jefferson counties as of 2011. The main membership is comprised primarily of transit operators, but the union also includes 800 members working in over 80 craft occupations. ATU Local 587 represents employees of King County Metro, Washington First Transit, Washington Solid Ground, and Clallam Transit System Clallam County, Washington.

American Federation of Teachers, Local 401 records, 1936-1949. Labor organization of the University of Washington faculty. Local 401 became disaffiliated with the American Federation of Labor (AFL) in 1948.

Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express, and Station Employees Northern Pacific System Board of Adjustment Tacoma Division records, 1940-1970. Labor union, Tacoma, Washington.

Cannery Workers and Farm Laborers Union, Local 7 [ILWU Local 37] records, 1915-1985. Records of a Seattle, Washington labor union founded in 1933 as the Cannery Workers and Farm Laborers Union Local #37. It was affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The local represented Alaska salmon cannery workers and farm workers. In 1937, the union became Cannery Workers and Farm Laborers Union Local 7 of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing, and Allied Workers of America with CIO affiliation. In 1945, Local 7 became affiliated with the Food, Tobacco, and Agricultural Workers of America (CIO). In 1951 the union became Local 37 of International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, and ca. 1987 it became Region 37 of IBU/ILWU. The membership historically was Filipino American cannery workers.

Graphic Communications International Union, Local 767M records, 1908-2009. Records of the Graphic Communications Conference of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Local 767M is the successor union of several merged printers' locals spanning back into the late 1800s.

Industrial Workers of the World records, 1906-1944. Records of the Industrial Workers of the World, a radical, syndicalist, labor organization formed in Chicago in 1905 by the Western Federation of Miners and other labor groups, Eugene Debs and Daniel De Leon. They chose to use a strictly non-political approach and to organize the disenfranchised.
Industrial Workers of the World Records Seattle Joint Branches records, 1905-1950. Records of a radical labor organization formed in Chicago in 1905, the IWW (known as Wobblies) chose to use a strictly non-political approach and to organize industrial unions to use economic action (strikes and slowdowns, etc.) as weapons in the class struggle.

Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific records, 1934-1985. Records of a labor union organized as Ferryboatmen's Union of California in San Francisco, 1918. The name was changed in 1936 when it affiliated with the CIO in 1937-1948. In 1948 to 1979 it was affiliated with Seafarers' International Union of North America. October 31, 1980 it was affiliated with International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

International Association of Machinists, Hope Lodge 79 records, 1932-1941. Records of the Association's Seattle local, Hope Lodge 79

International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, Aerospace Industrial District Lodge 751 Publication of IAM, 751. Digital reproductions of the local’s newsletter, The 751 Aero Mechanic, May 12, 1939-January 1, 2008. This link is to an online version of the publication hosted on the Online Computer Library Center (OCLC).

International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union Fishermen and Allied Workers Division, Local 3 records, 1935-1981. Records of several dozen locals. Two predecessors of the Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's union were the United Fishermen's Union of the Pacific, Puget Sound District, and International Fishermen and Allied Workers of America, Pacific District, Local 3 (IFAWA). The IFAWA includes about 15 small local unions as well as larger member unions such as the Alaska Fishermen's Unions .The IFAWA merged with ILWU in 1950. It was active with external organizations such as the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

International Typographical Union records, 1890-1982. Records of the union founded in 1852 as the National Typographical Union. It became the International Typographical Union in 1869 after entering into an affiliation with Canadian printers' unions. Affiliated with the affiliation with the Communication Workers of America in 1987, becoming the Printing, Publishing and Media Workers Sector of that organization. This collection includes charters for Local #142 (Olympia), 1890; for Local #355 (New Whatcom, later Bellingham), 1899; for Local #699 (Bremerton), 1912; for Local #99 (Seattle/Tacoma), 1974. Accession also includes convention programs of the ITU conventions in Seattle in 1929 and 1982, and a statement and article about the proposed Taft-Hartley Act, 1948 and 1949.

International Typographical Union, Local 99 records, 1907-1979. Records of the ITU local in Seattle, Washington. The local was created by the merger in 1974 of various locals whose records are represented here, of which Seattle (#202) and Tacoma (#170) were the largest. Bremerton and Olympia are also represented.

International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, Local 25 records, 1933-1971. Records of the successor union to the Western Federation of Miners that became International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in 1916, and weathered repeated accusations of Communism against its leadership during the 1940s and 1950s; in 1967 it merged with the United Steelworkers of America. Local 25 of the International Union of Mine, Mill, and Smelter Workers was organized in 1933 by workers at the Tacoma Smelter of the American Smelting and Refining Company. It continued as Local 25 of the United Steelworkers of America when the International merged with the United Steelworkers.

International Woodworkers of America Records, 1936-1987. Records include minutes of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union, Local #2532, Portland and its successor, the International Woodworkers of America in 1937, when most of the LSMWU affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations. This seems to be a record of the Columbia River District Council, which opposed the more radical leadership in Washington State.

International Woodworkers of America Local 3-101 Records, 1935-1987. Records of an AFL-CIO labor union representing mill and timber workers. The International Woodworkers of America was established in 1940 as a Congress of Industrial Organizations union in Everett, Washington. From 1940, Local 101 represented workers in the Everett Weyerhaeuser mills and Eclipse Lumber Company. Unions which merged with Local 101 were other members active in the Snohomish Industrial Union Council, local coordinating arm of the CIO. Local 18 of Cannery Workers' branch of International Fishermen and Allied Workers of America was also a member of the SIUC. Other local unions that merged with it included branches from Anacortes, Bellingham, Sedro Woolley, and Sultan, Washington. When Districts 2 and 3 of the union merged in 1953, the Everett local's designation changed from 2-101 to 23-101; in 1959 it became Local 3-101.
King County Labor Council Records, 1889-2003. Records of the coordinating and decision-making body of the various affiliated union locals in King County, Washington. Began in 1888 as the Western Central Labor Union, it was renamed the Central Labor Council of Seattle and Vicinity in 1905.

King County Labor Council Provisional Trades Section minutes, 1935-1971. Minutes of the Council's Washington Provisional Trades Section.

Maritime Federation of the Pacific Coast Convention Reports, 1936-1937. Federation of labor unions in the maritime industry convention reports, 1936-1937; Report of San Francisco Area District Council #2.

National Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, Local 38 records, 1926-1942. Records of the Seattle local, including correspondence, minutes, journals, legislative materials, financial records, ephemera, agreements, reports, constitutions and bylaws of the union on national and local levels. The correspondence is mainly that of William Peel, business manager of Local 38.

Office and Professional Employees International Union, Local 8 records, 1938-1998. Organizational records of a local union which represents over 4,000 members in health care, social services, insurance and office settings throughout Washington. Local 8 was affiliated with the International Union of Clerical and Office Workers of a wide variety of businesses around Puget Sound. The name of the parent body changed from Office Employees International Union, ca. 1966.

Pierce County Central Labor Council records, 1890-1989. Records of the local coordinating arm of AFL-CIO. The Tacoma Trades Council was organized in 1890 as an independent organization. Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor in 1899. Tacoma Central Labor Council was chartered by the AFL in November, 1907. The records of the Tacoma Trades Council were turned over to the Central Labor council at this time. As a result of the AFL-CIO merger the Tacoma Central Labor Council (AFL) and the Pierce County Industrial Union Council (CIO) merged to form the Pierce County Central Labor Council in December, 1957. The Central Labor Council published its newspaper, the Tacoma Labor Advocate, from 1909-1978.

Retail Clerks International Protective Association, Local 186 (Enumclaw, Wash.) minutes, 1941-1955. Minutes consist of bound volume and include roll calls and minutes for regular and special meetings of the Enumclaw chapter of the RCIPA.

Seattle Union Record Business Records, 1903-1927. Business records of the Seattle Union Record, a labor-owned newspaper published in Seattle as a weekly, 1903-1918; and as a daily 1918-1928 by the Seattle Central Labor Council.

Service Employees International Union, Local 120 records, 1924-1989. Records of the Building Service Employees International Union, known since 1968 as the Service Employees International Union. BSEIU Local 108 merged into BSEIU Local 120 in 1960, which in turn merged with SEIU Local 925 around July of 2001. The successor organization, SEIU Local 925, is comprised of the public sector employees of the former locals. Minutes of the Bellingham Central Labor Council are part of the collection, apparently because it was within BSEIU Local 108’s geographic and occupational jurisdiction of Bellingham Washington before they merged with Local 120.

Ship Scalers, Dry Dock, and Boat Yard Workers Union, Local 541 records, 1930-1986. Records of Ship Scalers Union, Local 541 representing ship scalers working in the Seattle area from the 1930s until 1986. It was affiliated with the International Hod Carriers', Building and Common Laborers' Union of America, later renamed the Laborers' International Union of North America. Ship scalers clean the interior and exterior of ships, scraping and sandblasting, mopping up fuel from tanks, and removing debris. After World War II, a majority of the members of the local were African Americans. The local had a series of conflicts with the international to which it belonged, concerning efforts by the local rank and file to elect a slate of reform candidates as officers in 1972 and again in 1980. The dispute led to years of court challenges and reversals. Local 541 was suspended by the Laborers' International Union of North America in 1986 and representation of Seattle area ship scalers was subsequently transferred to another local.

United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America District Council Seattle records, 1918-1972. Records of the city-wide coordinating body for affiliated local unions. Along with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, the organizations included in this accession are the Central Labor Council of Seattle and Vicinity, Northwest Chapter of Associated General Contractors of America, Seattle Department of Lighting, and Washington State Council of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Local 131 (Seattle, Washington) records, 1888-1960. Records of Local 131, a Seattle affiliate of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, include correspondence, minutes, financial records, ephemera; 1888-1960. It also includes Washington Benevolent Association records and minutes of the Portland, Seattle, and Tacoma Building Trades Councils.

Washington Education Association records, 1920-1977. Records of a statewide professional association established in 1889. For more than 80 years, membership included teachers and administrators. In the 1970s, following passage of a collective bargaining law for teachers, WEA evolved into a pro-active teachers union. Today, their members include a range of staff in educational institutions.

Washington State Congress of Industrial Organizations records, 1950-1957. Records of the statewide organization of local unions affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO). It merged with the Washington State Federation of Labor in 1957, becoming the Washington State Labor Council. These two labor bodies had been bitter rivals in the 1930s but the need to cooperate to defeat right-to-work measures (Initiative 198 in 1956 and Initiative 202 in 1958) cemented their alliance.

Washington State Labor Council records, 1919-1996. Records of the Washington State Labor Council, AFL-CIO (WSLC), formed in 1957 following the merger of the Washington State Federation of Labor (AFL) and the Washington State CIO Council. These two labor bodies had been bitter rivals in the 1930s but had slowly grown closer together. The need to cooperate to defeat right-to-work measures (Initiative 198 in 1956 and Initiative 202 in 1958) cemented their alliance. After defeating these measures, labor groups took the offensive. The United Labor Lobby (ULL), which grew out of the committees created to defeat the right-to-work initiatives, won an extension of the 40 hour maximum work week to all Washington workers and an expansion of the unemployment insurance system in 1959. The ULL and WSLC were not able to follow up on these victories in the early 1960s as the increasingly Republican state legislature soon forced labor back on the defensive.

Washington State Nurses Association records, 1911-1980. Records of the Washington State Nurses Association established in 1908 as the Washington State Graduate Nurses Association. The name was changed in 1940. It is affiliated with American Nurses Association and engages in collective bargaining with employers.
Personal Papers labor union officers, members, and activists.

Ted Astley papers, 1920-1994. Papers of a World War II veteran administering an Army program that provided correspondence courses for overseas personnel, later a career counselor for veterans at the University of Washington. Called to testify before the Canwell Committee in 1948 on charges that he was a communist, Astley refused to answer any of its questions. Shortly after, Astley was fired from his counseling position at University of Washington. In 1954 Astley testified before House Un-American Activities Committee hearings in Seattle. In 1962, Astley became a teacher, working in education as a secondary level English and social studies in the Seattle area.
E. Raymond Attebery papers, 1913-1979. Papers of the pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church in Seattle (renamed Grace Methodist Church ca. 1939). Attebery was active in civic causes. In 1929 he played an active role in the effort to free Industrial Workers of the World members jailed after the 1919 Armistice Day clash between workers and veterans in Centralia. He was also a vocal advocate of Prohibition and a critic of American isolationism. Attebery joined the Washington National Guard as a chaplain in 1929. He was called to active duty in September 1940, and sent overseas the following year. He died while landing with his division on Biak Island, New Guinea, in May 1944. Scope and Content The E. Raymond Attebery Papers document the Seattle pastor's activities as a civic leader, soldier, and military chaplain. Accession 3176-1 includes correspondence with his family. The bulk of the letters are to his wife, Miriam, written while Attebery was serving as a chaplain during World War II. There are also letters to his children, Eliot, Jerry, Edgar, and Gay. (Edgar also served in World War II and would be killed in action just months after his father's death.) Letters to his mother, Betty, date largely from his time in France during World War I. A scrapbook containing letters and clippings documents Attebery's career from the early 1930s. The Friends of City Light subgroup includes correspondence and minutes of the organization, which was formed to support municipal ownership of Seattle's electric utility. The Committee on the Centralia Armistice Day Tragedy subgroup documents the efforts of Washington State church groups and individuals to exonerate Industrial Workers of the World members imprisoned after the 1919 confrontation. The committee was established by the Puget Sound Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1929 to investigate the Centralia shootings and was part of a local movement that eventually led to a joint investigation by several national religious organizations.

Eugene Barnett (b. 1801-d. 1973) oral history collection, 1940-1961. Oral history interviews of a trade unionist. Worked as a mineworker from the age of eight. After moving to Southwest Washington sometime after 1908, he joined the Industrial Workers of the World. On November 11, 1919, he witnessed the attack on the IWW union hall in Centralia, was arrested, tried, and imprisoned for eleven years. After his release to care for his ill wife, he worked as a miner and in various other occupations.

Samuel B. Bassett papers, 1926-1965. Papers of a Seattle lawyer who practiced with Labor lawyer George Vandeveer from 1924-1942 and represented the Joint Council of Teamsters, No. 28 and various Teamster locals.
Rayfield Becker papers, 1919-1939. Papers of the last of the Industrial Workers of the World members jailed due to the 'Centralia Massacre, 1919'; he was released from prison in 1939. He died in 1950.

Franklin F. Behm papers, 1943-1946. Papers of a member of the Washington Federation of Teachers.

Stephen R. Blair papers, 1919-1996. Papers of a homosexual labor union member with experiences in the military, the Marine Cooks and Stewards Union, and theater. Became involved in the NUMCS while working as a ship's delegate on passenger cruise lines and freighters. Served as a delegate for a union-wide meeting on the S.S. Aleutian. Blair earned top wages waiting tables on luxury liners before being blacklisted in the 1950s by the Merchant Marines. He also held positions as a hospital orderly, a medical assistant for an Arctic oil rig named Kavik, and a studio prop man on Hollywood movie sets.

William Morley Bouck papers, 1918-1941. Papers of a progressive leader in the Washington State Grange, 1918-1921; Western Progressive Farmers; and the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation. He ran for vice-president of the United States on the Farmer-Labor ticket. Bouck was arrested in 1918 by federal marshals for violating the Espionage Act as part of the Wilson Administration's crackdown on dissent during World War I. With the support of the state Grange and allies in organized labor, Bouck's case was dropped the Justice Department.

Carlos Bulosan papers, 1914-1976. Papers of a Filipino-American author, poet, and migrant laborer. Began working as a day laborer at age 11 after only 3 years of formal schooling. Came to Seattle at 17 and was shanghaied by a local hotel proprietor and sold to an Alaskan fish cannery. At the end of the season he came back to Washington and began work as a migrant farm worker, mostly in Washington and California. During the years 1935-1941, he attempted to organize migrant workers into unions and began to write about their conditions, particularly those of Filipino immigrant workers. He had begun to write in 1936 during a two year stay in a Los Angeles hospital for tuberculosis. He published some poetry in 1936, and some short stories in 1938. He continued writing until about the mid-1940s, and wrote very little during the last 10 years of his life. He died in 1956.

William and Cecilia Corr papers, 1906-2006. Papers of William 'Bill' John Corr and his wife Cecilia Genevieve Brodine Corr who were Seattle activists interested in socialism, labor, civil rights, and the environment. Cecilia Corr was also an artist. During World War II Bill worked as a welder and was an active unionizer until his communist associations were revealed in the 1950s. Cecilia’s participation in peace efforts and civil rights included involvement with the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF), Citizens' Train, Washington State Council of American-Soviet Friendship, and the Howard Costigan papers, 1933-1989. Papers of Howard Costigan (1904-1985) a long-time political organizer, researcher and writer. He was noted mostly for his work as co-founder and executive secretary of the Communist-dominated Washington Commonwealth Federation, and then later as a fervent anti-communist in both Washington and California.

Joseph Clancy papers, 1941-1958. Papers of a Seattle union official, including correspondence, minutes, financial records, court papers, ephemera, clippings mainly concerned with dispute between International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers, Iron Ship Builders, and Helpers of America, Local 104 and the International office which placed Local 104 in receivership in 1946, 1941-1958.

Clyde W. Deal papers, 1934-1978. Papers of the founder, president and business manager of the Ferryboatmen's Union of California, later the Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific, from 1918 to 1941. He joined the U. S. Conciliation Service in 1941 as a commissioner and served until 1945. For two years he was labor counselor in charge of labor negotiations for the Atlanta Journal. He rejoined the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service from 1948 to 1958. From 1958 to 1969, he was an arbitrator in labor disputes in California and Oregon. From 1965 to 1969, he was a labor consultant at the Tongue Point Job Corps Center in Oregon.

Hugh DeLacy papers, 1938-1985. Papers of a professor of English at the University of Washington, who helped organize Local 410 of the American Federation of Teachers, and served as its delegate to the Seattle Central Labor Council, and a member of the Seattle City Council. Active in the Democratic Party and the Washington Commonwealth Federation. During World War II, worked as machinist in the shipyards. Congressman for the first district during the 79th Congress; active member of the left wing of the Democratic Party.

Edwin Harold Eby papers 1838-1974. Chapter drafts of Vernon L. Parrington’s Main Currents in American Thought (1927), which Eby helped to edit, as well as Parrington's syllabi and notes; together with audio tape of interview with Eby. Eby was a University of Washington professor of English and a member of the faculty union, American Federation of Teachers, Local 401. Eby was one of the University of Washington faculty members who appeared before the Canwell Committee (Joint Legislative Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities) and by the U.W. Faculty Committee on Tenure and Academic Freedom for his political beliefs and activism. The dismissal of three other U.W. professors were the first formally acknowledged faculty firings in the United States for Communist-related activities.

Garland O. Ethel Papers, 1913-1980. Papers of an English professor at the University of Washington, who was best known for his involvement with the state legislature’s Canwell Committee and the University Faculty Committee on Tenure and Academic Freedom during their anti-communist investigations in the late 1940s. During these hearings Ethel admitted to being a former Communist, but because he renounced his beliefs he was allowed to stay at the University and served two-years on probation. These anti-communist hearings set a precedent for other states and the U. S. Congress to follow during the Red Scare of the 1950s. He was an activist for the American Federation of Teachers Local 401. During his years as a University of Washington student, the Seattle General Strike, the activities of the Industrial Workers of the World, and the amount of poverty that Ethel witnessed in the U. S. led him to embrace Marxist ideology. In the 1930s Ethel became involved with many liberal and radical organizations. He was active in the labor movement, especially through the American Federation of Teachers, Local 401, and was active in trying to defeat anti-labor candidates and initiatives. One of his major campaigns was fighting Initiative 130 which was an effort to restrict the right to strike. To explore his Marxist beliefs further Ethel traveled to the Soviet Union where he worked as assistant editor of the Moscow News in 1932. During his travels in Europe he was horrified by Fascism and later claimed that he joined the Communist party in the U. S. because it was the only organized group trying to fight the burgeoning right-wing movements in Europe.

Garland O. Ethel photograph collection, 1898-1975. Photograph collection created by Garland Ethel, and English professor at the University of Washington for 42 years before retiring in 1969. In 1948 when he was caught up in the so-called state legislature’s "Canwell investigation," looking for Communists at the University of Washington. Ethel was cited for contempt by a state legislative committee for refusing to name other University of Washington faculty members who reportedly attended Communist meetings with him. As result of the hearings, the University of Washington Board of Regents put him and two other faculty members on probation. Secretary of the American Federation of Teachers, Local 401 (U.W.); and active with the State’s Joint Legislative Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities. Albert 'Bert' H. Farmer papers, 1926-1981. Papers of a labor organizer and charter member of the International Longshoremen’s Association Local 38-76 (Everett, Washington), formed in 1929. During the Pacific Coast maritime strike of 1934, Bert Farmer served as squad captain of the Everett Strike Committee and also on the Joint Northwest Strike Committee. When union members voted to accept arbitration by the National Longshoremen's Board and began returning to work, Bert Farmer was appointed as a government supervisor of hiring halls. He was the only union member on the entire coast to be appointed to such a position. Farmer's role was to encourage both workers and employers to accept National Labor Relations Board guidelines and to defuse disputes. In the spring following the strike, Pacific Coast unions formed the Maritime Federation of the Pacific. Bert Farmer was present at the organizational meeting on April 15, 1935, and became a trustee.

Melville Jacobs papers, 1918-1974. Papers of an author, anthropologist, folklorist, linguist, and professor of anthropology and linguistics, University of Washington; who died in 1971. The collection includes his correspondence, manuscripts of writings, field notebooks, ethnographic and linguistic notes, recordings, and photos, primarily relating to Jacobs's investigations of Oregon and Washington Indian languages and oral traditions. Jacobs was one of the members of the campus faculty union, American Federation of Teachers Local 401. Because of his political beliefs, Jacobs appeared before the Canwell Committee and by the U.W. Faculty Committee on Tenure and Academic Freedom. The dismissal of three University of Washington professors for political reasons—the first formally acknowledged faculty firings in the United States for Communist-related activities—set a precedent for the rest of the country to follow in the 1950s. , Jacobs retained his job but the incident seriously impeded his career and prospects for tenure at University of Washington. Part of this collection documents his appearance before the Canwell Committee and its aftermath.

Frank Jenkins oral history, 1972. Oral history interview with an International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union Local 19 (Seattle) official. Jenkins on the Seattle docks as a longshoreman. He joined the longshoremen's union in 1934 and served as one of its officers from 1936 to 1940, and from 1943 until his retirement in 1967. Jenkins details the history of the unions' exclusionary practices in the Puget Sound area and explains the issue of African Americans as strikebreakers. He discusses discriminatory hiring policies which limited employment opportunities for black longshoremen in Seattle, the 1921 and 1934 strikes, and the changed employment practices resulting from the latter strike. The structure of the longshoremen's union (ILWU) is discussed, as well as some contract negotiations that occurred during Jenkins' tenure as a union official. Military oversight of the Seattle Port during World War II is mentioned, including the discriminatory recruitment practices used by both the Army and the Navy. Jenkins illustrates the consequences of his union activism during the war and afterwards during the McCarthy era by recounting several episodes in which his port security pass was revoked and subsequently reissued. He chronicles the turbulent post-war history of the longshoremen's union in the Puget Sound area and explains the reason for the union's expulsion from the CIO in 1948.

Clara and Richard Fraser papers, 1905-1949, 1970. Papers of a woman born to Russian-Jewish immigrant parents in Los Angeles in 1923. In 1930s, she joined The Young People's Socialist League and enrolled at University of California Los Angeles in 1939 and receiving degrees in English, Drama, and Education. She married at 18, and she and her husband moved to Chicago. After World War II, they returned to Los Angeles where Fraser began to work with the Socialist Workers Party. They next moved to Seattle to organize a Socialist Workers Party in that city. In 1966, Fraser and other feminists began a free college class titled Marx and the Women's Question which was the beginning of the Women's Studies Program at the University of Washington. Soon after she joined the original Seattle Opportunities Industrialization Center (SOIC). She helped found Radical Women and the Freedom Socialist Party. After being fired from SOIC, she was hired by Seattle City Light as an education coordinator, 1973, but in 1974 she was the leading figure in the walkout of City Light employees. After returning to work, she was fired for what Fraser contends was her part in the strike. She appealed this dismissal which resulted in a legendary court case that was settled in her favor, in 1981.

Frederick T. Haley Papers, 1931-2001. Papers of a Tacoma businessman and civic leader. His chief interests in civic life were education, civil rights, and civil liberties. Haley's father, J. Clifford Haley, co-founded Brown & Haley Co., a candy manufacturing company known for its signature product, Almond Roca, in 1912. Fred Haley earned a B.A. from Dartmouth College in 1935 and returned to Tacoma to work as a salesman for Brown & Haley. He also studied business at the University of Washington. During World War II Haley served in the Pacific as a Navy harbor pilot. There he developed a lifelong love of the Pacific Islands and to civic causes. He became chairman and chief executive officer of Brown & Haley after his father’s death in 1954. In the 1950s and 1960s his efforts were focused mainly on education and civil rights and liberties. During his tenure on the Tacoma School Board, on which he served two terms as chair, Haley was an outspoken critic of de-facto school segregation and advocated busing programs as a remedy. He charged that segregated schools hindered the development of all children in a racially diverse society. As a school board member, Haley took another stand on a controversial issue when he spoke out in defense of Jean Schuddakopf, an elementary school counselor who refused to submit to questioning by the House Un-American Activities Committee. He served as president of the Pierce County School Directors’ Association in 1957.

Organization Records

Employment Rights & Civil Rights Organizations

National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Vancouver Branch records, 1914-1967 Records of Vancouver, Washington branch of the national civil rights organization.

Opportunities Industrialization Center records, 1966-1989. Records of a nonprofit community-based vocational training center. It was founded as an outgrowth of the OIC movement which had been started two years earlier in Philadelphia. In 1972, OIC Seattle became the first community-based organization to receive federal designation as a Skills Center. Its rapid growth and expanding programs made possible the building of a multi-million dollar training center dedicated in 1974.

Seattle Urban League records, 1930-1997. Records of the Seattle Urban League (later the Urban League of Metropolitan Seattle), a social service organization created mainly for advocacy, community organization, and development of African American, other racial minorities, and the poor, but whose broader mission is to eliminate racial inequality, to create equal opportunity, and to promote self-sufficiency for these populations of Seattle citizens. Seattle Urban League programs for vocational training and employment included direct services to individuals such as training workshops, job placement and referral, and job fairs. In addition to these services, in 1964 the “Equal Opportunity Employers” roster was established, which listed businesses that had pledged an open-door policy in hiring practices and that employed more than 40 persons. Another significant employment program was On-The-Job Training (OJT). OJT was initially developed and administered by the National Urban League in 1966 under a grant from the Department of Labor. Its primary mission was to seek out and develop on-the-job training opportunities for unemployed or underemployed members of minority groups.

Washington Pension Union records, 1906-1965. Records of an organization, founded in 1937 as the Old Age Pension Union, the group's name was changed to Washington Pension Union in 1944. The WPU represented a coalition of liberal-left organizations that were friendly with the Communist Party and working to reform the economic system. At the height of its influence in the Great Depression, the organization dissolved in 1961. The WPU advocated adequate pensions for the elderly and public assistance for the needy. William J. Pennock was a founder and president of the Washington Pension Union until his death in 1953.

Young Women's Christian Association (University of Washington) records, 1903-1982. Records of the University of Washington Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA), established in 1895 by Ella Chamberlain, head of the English department. The University of Washington chapter of the YWCA has a history of service and advocacy. Of particular interest to labor historians is accession 1930-003, (1918-1975; bulk 1964-1975) and accession 1930-021 (1950-1982; bulk: 1969-1981). These segments reflect the University of Washington YWCA chapter's interest and engagement of issues of gender and sexual equality in society. Part of this concern was equality in employment. Of particular interest are records documenting Mechanica, a training and job placement center aimed at getting women into apprenticeships in the construction industry.

Pro-Labor organization records

Church Council of Greater Seattle records, 1913-2003. Records of the organization, founded in 1919 as the Seattle Federation of Churches, whose stated purpose was "to promote the welfare, comity and cooperation of the churches and to foster religious movements and Community betterment." Over its history, the organization has championed social service and activism on a wide range of issues including personal morals and civic betterment to international issues of justice, peace, and disarmament. During the 1960s, the council took stands in such socio-political areas of race relations, civil rights, and human service. In 1968 a Task Force for Redesign was appointed to recommend an administrative structure that could more efficiently "meet new and pressing urban problems." It was felt that the ability to address the problems of a rapidly growing urban community was hampered by the tradition-bound philosophy and departmental structure of the existing council. The council served thousands of hungry unemployed workers who had been laid off when Boeing Aircraft Company layoffs threw the Seattle economy into a depression and left thousands of people hungry. The Neighbors in Need food bank program was developed by Seattle churches as a response to the crisis.

Socialist Labor Party Seattle Section records, 1930-1962. Records of a Seattle political labor organization. The Seattle Section of the Socialist Labor Party (SLP) was founded in the early 1890's as a branch of the Socialist Labor Party of America. The SLP was founded as a Marxist political party in 1876, the first nationwide socialist party in the United States. The party promoted the doctrines of Daniel DeLeon.

Washington Committee for Academic Freedom records, 1947-1949. Records of a state-wide group of citizens established in June 1948 from across the political spectrum to defend and promote academic freedom. Frances W. Herring was executive secretary for the organization. Records document the efforts of the Committee to protect academic freedom in response to the Joint Legislative Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities (Canwell Committee) hearings investigating possible Communist activities at the University of Washington and the firings of three professors by the University of Washington. Records were those of Ethelyn M. Hartwich, a member of the executive board.

Washington Association of Churches records, 1935-1996. Records of the Washington - Northern Idaho Council of Churches, which was incorporated in 1935, with Dr. Gertrude Apel serving as an executive staff member. She also served on the executive staff in the Seattle Federation of Churches until 1958, at which point the state council and King County Council of Churches split after a consultation with the long-time ecumenical leader, Ross Sanderson. In 1967, the state council's title was changed to the Washington Council of Churches and later, in 1975, it was renamed the Washington Association of Churches.

Workmen's Circle/Arbeiter Ring Branch No. 304 records, 1925-1971. Records of the Workmen's Circle (Der Arbeiter Ring) which was founded in the 1890s to serve as a mutual benefit society and a cultural-social organization for members of the Jewish working class. In 1900, it was reorganized as a fraternal insurance company and eventually grew to include 700 branches with a total membership of 70,000. This collection is from the estate of Ben Stein who was respectively secretary, financial secretary, and president, 1930s-1950s, of Branch #304 of the Workmen's Circle.

Governmental Records Relating to Labor

Frederick G. Hamley papers, 1933-1963. Papers of a lawyer, public official, and judge, who was chair of the Governors' Lumber Fact Finding Board during the Pacific Northwest Lumber strike of 1954. The subgroup Washington Governor's Lumber Fact Finding Board includes Hamley's correspondence as chair of this seven-member board in 1954 as well as documents and transcripts from the formal hearings. The panel completed its work in late December, recommending a wage increase but a smaller one than requested by the International Woodworkers of America.

Dwight Edwards Robinson papers, 1942-1984. Papers of a University of Washington business professor. In addition to his teaching, Robinson was a member of the Washington Governor's Lumber Fact Finding Board that was created as a result of the Pacific Northwest Lumber Strike of 1954.

Labor Critics and Opponents

Broussais C. Beck papers, 1919-1961. Papers of an anti-labor Seattle businessman who played a role in infiltrating Seattle labor union activities in 1919-1920, planting spies into the ranks of the labor movement during the era of the Seattle General Strike.

Austin Griffiths papers, 1891-1952. Papers of an anti-labor Progressive Republican civic activist, who was a Seattle City Councilman from 1910-1913 and 1934-1937, chief of police in 1914, Superior Court judge from 1921-1929, School Board member (1929-1930, 1931-1934). Griffiths was a member of the Minute Men, a voluntary association of labor spies during the Seattle General Strike.

George E. Rennar papers, 1933-1972. Papers of a collector of right-wing political literature, including those of such labor opponents as the Ku Klux Klan, Silver Legion, Fascists, and white supremacist organizations.

William C. Ruegnitz papers, 1906-1944. Papers of a conservative anti-Industrial Workers of the World, anti-labor forestry leader. Ruegnitz served as Western representative for Bates & Rogers Construction Company, 1903 to 1915; secretary and manager of the Loyal Legion of Loggers & Lumbermen (a company union) from 1921 to 1926; president of the Loyal Legion of Loggers & Lumbermen, 1926 to 1936; and secretary and manager of Columbia Basin Sawmills and Columbia Basin Loggers from 1937 onward.
Silver Shirt Legion of America Washington State Division records, 1933-1940. Records of a right-wing, anti-labor, political organization. The Silver Shirt Legion of America was founded by William Dudley Pelley (1890-1965) in 1933. The parent organization began as Silver Shirts of America, was later renamed Silver Legion of America and, in 1934, became Silver Shirt Legion of America. State liaison office was Orville W. Roundtree.

United States Subversive Activities Control Board records, 1953. Records of a quasi-judicial United States government agency concerned with communist and communist front activities. The collection includes hearing records, May 5-Oct. 16, 1953 into such activities at the University of Washington. The accession also includes the notes of Ed M. Fitzroy.

Employers and Employers’ Associations Records

Frederick T. Haley Papers, 1931-2001. Papers of a Tacoma businessman and civic leader. His chief interests in civic life were education, civil rights, and civil liberties. Haley's father, J. Clifford Haley, co-founded Brown & Haley, a candy manufacturing company known for its signature product, Almond Roca, in 1912. Fred Haley earned a B.A. from Dartmouth in 1935 and returned to Tacoma to work as a salesman for Brown & Haley. He also studied business at the University of Washington. During World War II Haley served in the Pacific as a Navy harbor pilot. In the 1950s and 1960s his efforts were focused mainly on education and civil rights and liberties. During his tenure on the Tacoma School Board, on which he served two terms as chair, Haley was an outspoken critic of de-facto school segregation and advocated busing programs as a remedy. As a school board member, Haley took another stand on a controversial issue when he spoke out in defense of Jean Schuddakopf, an elementary school counselor who refused to submit to questioning by the House Un-American Activities Committee. He served as president of the Pierce County School Directors’ Association in 1957. Haley continued his work for civil rights as a founding member of the Washington Citizens’ Committee for Civil Rights Legislation. During this time he also served on the Washington State Advisory Committee to the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights and on the boards of the Washington State Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Washington State Board Against Discrimination.

Palmer Coking Coal Company records, c. 1895-2005. Records of a coal mining company operating in the southeastern King County area

Merrill and Ring Lumber Company records, 1865-1976. Records relating to Thomas Merrill, son of a Maine lumbering family, who began a series of logging companies in Michigan in the 1860s. In 1886 he joined Clark Ring to form the Merrill & Ring Lumber Company, headquartered in Saginaw. In 1902 the company moved its headquarters from Saginaw to Hoquiam, Washington. The center of Merrill & Ring logging operations was in the rugged territory near the Pysht River, west of Port Angeles, Washington. Collection includes records of dealings with trade associations, state and federal agencies, such as United States Forest Service, and Spruce Production Division of the War Dept., and others.

Pacific Coast Maritime Industry Board records, 1942-1945. Records of an organization established to govern longshore labor relations on the Pacific Coast during World War II.

Port Blakely Mill Company records, 1876-1998. Records of firm, established in 1876 by Renton, Homes & Company of San Francisco, to buy timber lands and to conduct lumber operation in Washington. The operation was sold to David Skinner and John W. Eddy in 1903. Milling operations ceased in 1917 when Skinner and Eddy transferred to shipbuilding in Seattle. It became the Eddy Family business in 1924 and was primarily engaged in the sale of stumpage.

Seattle Port Commission records, 1899-1960. Records of the publicly owned governing body for the Seattle waterfront. The Seattle Port Commission was established by King County voters in September 1911 as a publicly owned and controlled governing body for the City's waterfront area.

Svenska Posten records 1925-1961, undated. Collection of a Swedish-language newspaper (Svenska Posten means: Swedish Post). Collection includes a list of Industrial Workers of the World members reported as undesirable as employees. Correspondence, clippings, ephemera, photographs, scrapbook of Gerda Risberg.

Jonathan Dembo, Ph.D. Biography

Jonathan Dembo

The author was born in Bombay, India in 1948. His father was among the first American foreign service officers in the newly independent India. Dr. Dembo grew up in India (3 tours), South Africa, Pakistan, and Kenya. He attended Washington University in St. Louis and the University of Pittsburgh. He earned his PhD in history from the University of Washington in Seattle in 1978.

From 1985 until 2000, Dr. Dembo was employed at the Cincinnati Museum Center where he served as a manuscript curator, a supervisor of archives and manuscripts, archivist, records manager, and institutional historian. Since July 2000, Dr. Dembo has served as a Professor and Special Collections Curator in the Manuscripts and Rare Books Department of J. Y. Joyner Library at East Carolina University, Greenville, NC.
